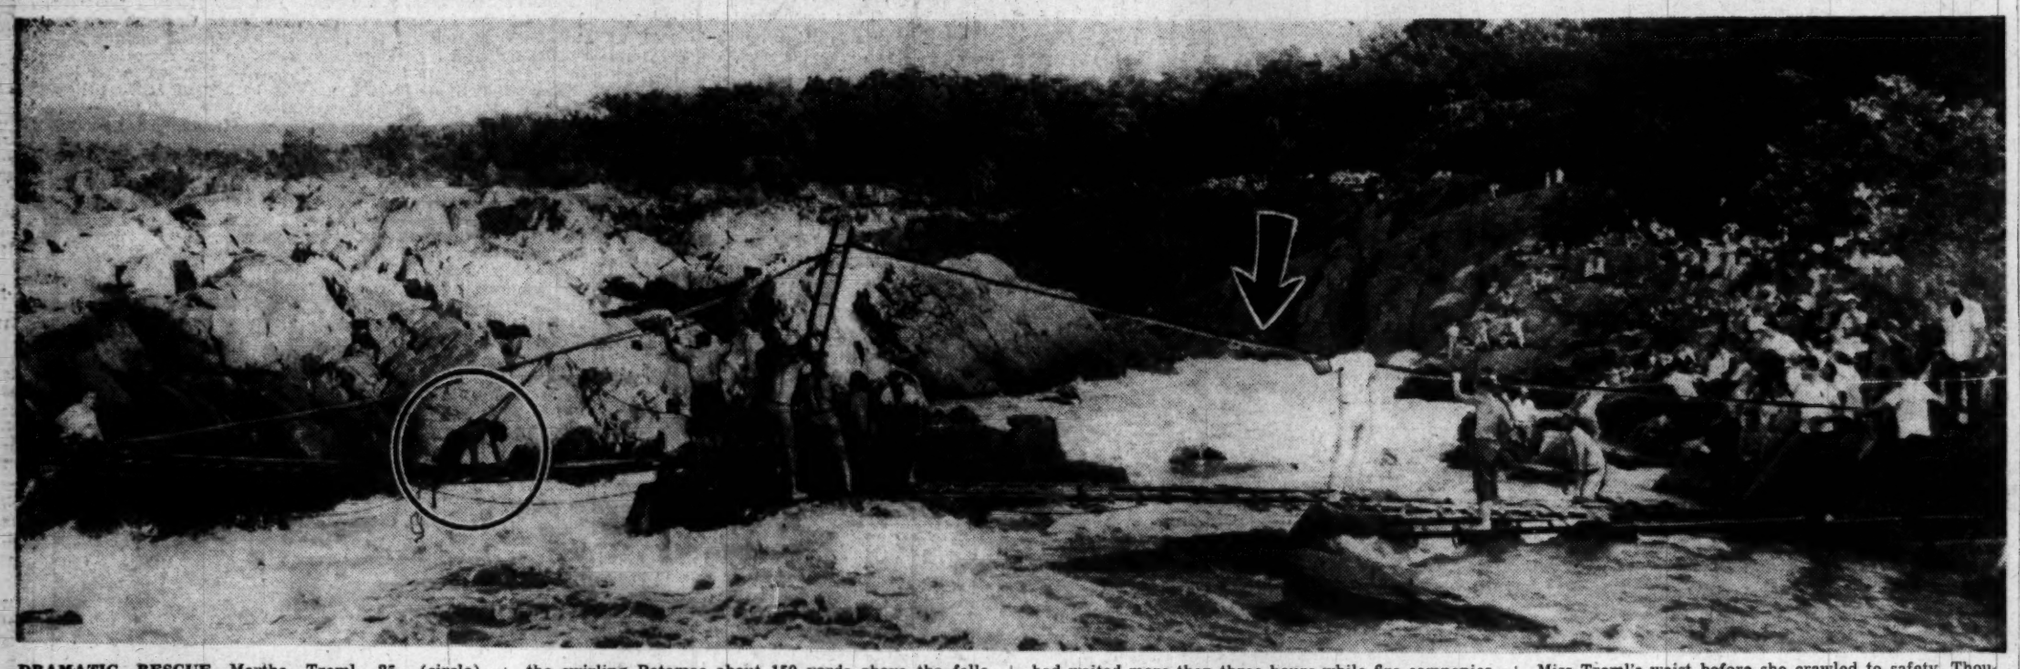
Chief Suspects Arson in $400,000 Blaze

Woman Marooned 3 Hours on Rock Above 20-Foot Falls



DRAMATIC RESCUE—Martha Treml, 25, (circle) crawls across first of three fire ladders used to bridge the swirling Potomac about 150 yards above the falls (arrow) as she is rescued from rock last night. She had waited more than three hours while fire companies erected the span of ladders. Rescuers tied a rope around Miss Treml's waist before she crawled to safety. Thousands of picnickers watched her rescue

Silver Spring Lumber Yard Fire Perils Store Area

Heat and Smoke Fell 50 Firemen; Equipment Rushed From Many Places

The largest fire in the history of Silver Spring, Md., destroyed a lumber yard and six buildings late yesterday afternoon, causing damage officially estimated at $400,000.

More than 50 of the 300 firemen who fought the blaze were overcome by smoke and heat.

All available fire-fighting equipment in Montgomery County, plus 10 units from Prince Georges County, 10 from Washington, and others from the Navy at White Oak, Md., and Bethesda, joined the fight against the flames.

For a time, firemen feared that a major portion of the business district of Silver Spring might be engulfed by the flames which were heightened by a west-southwest wind.

Arson Theory Probed

Last night, while lumber piles were still burning, Fire Chief John A. Gilson of Silver Spring disclosed that he is investigating the possibility of arson. He said the blaze originated in a mill shed which had no electric wiring, no shavings or other refuse about, and only piles of clean lumber or partially completed millwork.

The blaze consumed the lumber yard, woodworking mill, and other service buildings of the Silver Spring Building & Supply Co., in the block bounded by Ripley and Bonifant sts., Georgia ave., and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad road tracks.

Last night, after consultation with President P. J. Griffin of the company, Fire Chief Gilson officially estimated the damage at $400,000.

Crowds Driven Back

At the height of the blaze, heat was so intense that spectators a block away had to shield their faces from the radiation. Nevertheless, some of the volunteer and professional fire companies stayed within 100-foot range of the blaze, desperately refusing to retreat, pouring water on it. The spectators marveled that men could stand the heat so close.

As a result, firemen dropped in their tracks repeatedly, were dragged or carried from range by their comrades, but the fight went on.

Ten were treated for smoke, burns or cuts at the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park. They included Hans Peppe, Takoma Park; Stephen Lascola, Naval Ordnance Laboratory; William Flagg.

D. C. Stay-At-Homes Spend Fourth of July In Battle With Heat

Fireworks, Oratory, Band Music Blended In Monument Events

With a battery of weapons ranging from hose baths for the kids to those long cool drinks for the grownups, city-bound Washingtonians celebrated Independence Day yesterday by engaging in a running battle with the heat.

—Some fought it out indoors. Others took their chances on the open air and ventured out into a day where the heat seemed like some anesthetic, numbing brain and body. Many of these promptly sought a shield in the form of a shady tree.

The thermometer was toying around with a warning 72 as early as 5:45 a. m. and at 6 p. m. had got down—or up—to business with a mean 92.

More of the same is due for today—"mostly sunny and continued hot, middle 90s," the weatherman said—as Capital and nearby residents revert to a basis, what with their work and other duties, of battling the heat only part-time.

But yesterday, being a holiday and the 173d anniversary of the Nation's independence, they could devote 60 minutes out of an hour trying to beat old man midsummer.

Out in Maryland, an employe of the Naval Medical Center did it by going fishing. He caught his fish all right but ended up overcome by heat as he was cleaning them at Swain's Lock.

Huell L. Mateer, 38, of 1025 Crawford dr., Rockcrest, a suburb of Rockville, was given first aid treatment by the Rockville rescue squad, then taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, where he was recovering satisfactorily last night but not having his fish dinner.

At the swimming pools you couldn't see the water for the people.

At places like Hains Point and Rock Creek Park it was summed

A vast crowd, estimated as high as 200,000, overspilled the Washington Monument Grounds last night for a traditional Fourth of July celebration of resounding oratory, martial music and spectacular fireworks.

For kids and grownups alike, the fireworks were the big show. They boomed like artillery through the downtown area and vividly illuminated a half-moon sky.

The oratory came from Gen. Jacob L. Devers, chief of the Army Field Forces, who warned that the instalments on freedom and independence, given across the line from Lexington to Okinawa, may never be completely paid.

Two of Best Bands

The fireworks, which could be seen by the President from Blair House if he wished, included such disparate aerial bursts as a portrait of President Truman and depiction of the "Girdle of Venus."

The music came from two of the Nation's best bands, The United States Marine and the United States Navy.

For good measure there was staged a scene, "The Drafting of the Declaration of Independence," from Paul Green's "The Common Glory."

Actors in the famous pageant, now in its third full season at Williamsburg, came up from the Virginia town on their day off to present the scene here. Narrator was Warner Schreiner, Washington native and a resident of Arlington, who plays the role regularly at Williamsburg.

"In 1949," Devers declared, "we cherish freedom and independence not only because they have been the key to our national existence but because they have been so dearly bought.

Example to World

"They were so dearly bought, in fact, that while instalments have been met at Lexington, Valley Forge, Gettysburg, Chateau-Thierry and most recently at the Rhine and Okinawa, we may never completely succeed in paying for them."

He recalled "the historic hour 173 years ago when a handful of patriots affixed their signatures to an unprecedented Declaration and

No Holiday Traffic Deaths In District

District police took pride last night in the holiday traffic record here. Inspector Arthur E. Miller, chief of the traffic division said that "District drivers are to be complimented on their caution. Up to midnight Monday, Washington was one of the few, if not the only large city in the United States to go through the last three days without a traffic fatality."

Squall Lashes At New York; Four Drown

Hundreds of Boats Upset; Heat Plunges 13 Degrees in ½ Hr.

New York, July 4 (AP).—Wind squalls and thunderstorms exploded like a firecracker over a steaming city today, swamping hundreds of small boats offshore nearby and causing at least four drownings.

Almost instantly the year's high temperature—96.7 degrees—took a sharp drop. It was 13 degrees lower in a half hour, and down two more degrees at the end of an hour.

Hundreds of pleasure boats were overturned by winds at 30 or 60 miles an hour.

[The United Press reported the high winds whirled dirt from the city's streets high into the air, blotting out the city's skyscrapers from view of persons two or three blocks away.

[The same news service said the Coast Guard had received some 300 distress calls from upturned, sinking or otherwise disabled small boats and could not even estimate the number of calls reporting missing relatives and friends.]

Holiday Accident Toll Soars to 601; 262 on Highways

By The Associated Press

The Fourth of July weekend accident death toll soared to at least 601 deaths at midnight Monday. This smashed last year's total of 500 for the entire three-day period.

The largest number of victims were cut down in highway crashes. With roads still clogged with millions of homeward-bound holiday makers, the traffic toll reached 262, climbing steadily toward the 290 fatalities predicted by the National Safety Council.

Drowning—claiming 213 lives—was the second worst killer.

Another 126 persons died in miscellaneous accidents.

Texas, with 39, led all States in the tabulation of violent deaths. New York was third with 37, Michigan second with 41, Illinois fourth with 29 and California fifth with 27.

Texas traffic deaths soared to 27. Drownings accounted for 21 dead in Michigan and 11 in Minnesota.

Martha Treml Saved From Potomac by Use Of Extension Ladder

As thousands of picnickers watched from the Virginia bank, a 25-year-old Washington secretary was rescued at 7:15 p. m. yesterday from a rocky islet in the swirling Potomac River at Great Falls.

The rescued woman, Martha Treml, 25, of 1420 16th st. nw., calmly waited more than three hours on a jagged rock as firemen worked to get ladders from the Virginia shore across the surging, 100-foot stretch of water to Middle Rock, where she was stranded.

Miss Treml was wading when the churning water of the Great Falls "spout" made her lose her footing. The water's force pushed her steadily toward the edge of a 20-foot waterfall. She saved herself from probable death by clinging to one of the crags jutting out from Middle Rock.

Friends saw her plight and phoned at once for help. Firemen from the McLean, Forestville and Clarendon volunteer fire departments responded.

At first, they were unable to bridge the gap and for a time it was thought a helicopter would have to be summoned.

Additional fire ladders were brought and firemen were then able to throw a thin bridge over the angry "spout."

Ralph Jackson, who operates a refreshment stand and merry-go-round at Great Falls Park, scene of the rescue, was the first to reach Miss Treml.

Johnson Appeals For Military Aid To Pact Nations

Wheeling, W. Va., July 5 (U.P.).—Louis Johnson, Defense Secretary, appealed today for American military aid to the Atlantic Pact nations "because our own security is bound up in their liberty."

"This effort to help in the preservation of world freedom," he said, "constitutes in its essence the very heart of the human philosophy on which our great Government was founded."

Johnson asked for congressional approval of the $1,450,000,000 program of arms for free nations, in an Independence Day address at the West Virginia State American Legion convention here.

He also urged strengthening of the unification setup.

"In these crucial days," he said, "we cannot afford the luxury and wastes of duplication and the lack of cohesion among members of the same all-American national defense teams that characterized some of our past efforts."

Senate Opens Atlantic Pact Debate Today

Ratification Believed Assured, But Length Of Talk Is Question

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The long-awaited debate over the North Atlantic treaty is scheduled to start today in the old Senate chamber, where other historic debates took place more than a century ago.

Administration leaders in the Senate have not the slightest doubt that the treaty will be ratified by more than the necessary two-thirds vote. The chief questions in their minds are the length of the debate and the size of the minority.

Until recently the leaders had estimated that 10 debating days would be needed. The Senate's temporary quarters are so cramped and uncomfortable, however, that some Senators privately expect a vote to come much sooner. The answer will depend partly on the talkativeness of Senators Malone (R., Nev.), Jenner (R., Ind.), Kem (R., Mo.) and a few others who have indicated in the past that they disliked the pact and would fight against ratifying it.

During the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings on the treaty, two Senators, Donnell (R., Mo.) and Watkins (R., Utah), used 43 per cent of all the hearing time in cross examining witnesses. What is troubling Administration leaders is not how these two will vote but how long they will talk.

Senator Watkins predicted yesterday that the related European arms program would cost seven or eight billion dollars for the first year.

"It will be six or seven times the $1,130,000,000 estimate of additional cash needed now given to Congress and the public," Watkins told the Associated Press.

The Senator said first-year estimates of $1,130,000,000 actually represent only the cost of getting armaments and supplies ready for shipment overseas.

"Our military leaders have testified that they plan to send new and modern armaments to Europe if the pact and rearmament measures are approved," he said.

"They also have the right to declare any equipment as surplus—so the real cost of rearmament will be in replacement of our own defenses sent overseas."

One who had been classed among the opponents, Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), announced last week that he would vote for the treaty. The most prevalent forecast is that not more than ten votes will be cast against the treaty in the end.

Secretary Acheson and his assistants at the State Department feel a prompt and overwhelming vote is important for its effect abroad.

Truman's Brother Injured in Fall From Barn Loft

Grandview, Mo., July 4 (AP).—President Truman's brother, J. Vivian Truman, suffered head injuries today in a fall from a barn loft at the family farm near here.

Dr. John R. McKee, family physician, said Truman's condition was not critical. The physician said Truman suffered shock after recovering from unconsciousness. He was taken to a Kansas City hospital.

Truman had enlisted the aid of his son, Harry Truman, and grandson, John Ross Truman, in removing picnic tables from the barn loft. He fell about 8 feet to the wooden floor and apparently his head struck a manger.

The President's brother is district director of the Federal Housing Administration.

Soft Coal Miners Start On 3-Day Week Today

Pittsburgh, July 4 (AP).—The Nation's soft coal industry starts something new Tuesday—a three-day workweek imposed by a union.

Shrill blasts from mine whistles will call the 480,000 hard and soft coal miners back to work at the end of the annual, paid, 10-day vacation.

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers has told the industry his men east of the Mississippi will work only Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday this week. On each following week during present contract negotiations they will work only Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Throughout the soft coal fields, operators are expected to post work notices for each day that they feel coal demand warrants production. The diggers are expected to ignore the call-to-work once they have three days in. In the hard coal fields a 10-year-old voluntary allocation program will continue to relate each firm's production to the total demand for anthracite.

Coal operators feel the three-day week ordered by Lewis has tinges of illegality along restraint of trade lines. That view was echoed in Washington. Senator Robertson (D., Va.) said a Senate inquiry will be held late this month or early in August.

Most miners, who lost two weeks' work in a March work stoppage and another week in June in a "stabilization" mine shutdown, said they were glad to work even three days instead of being idle.

The country had expected the miners to start another work stoppage Tuesday under the UMW's long-standing "no contract, no work" policy. The contract expired Thursday. Contract negotations which began May 25 have made little progress and now are recessed until July 12.

Lewis announced his three-day work week Thursday and said it would continue during contract bargaining to avoid "irritation." The UMW Journal hinted the short week might continue five months. That would whittle the present mined coal stockpile from about 75 million tons to a more normal reserve of some 25 million tons.

Some coal observers think Lewis prefers to hold off on a contract agreement until the coal reserve is closer to the lower figure and until winter makes the need for full production more urgent. That would put him in a stronger bargaining postion.

Britain Tags Dock Strike 'Communist'

London, July 4 (AP).—Labor Minister George Isaacs said today the London dock strike was the result of "a Communist maneuver."

Reporting on the strike to the House of Commons, Isaacs said 30 of the 88 ships made idle by the strike of 8336 stevedores were carrying food.

"This strike is hurting the country and the men cannot escape their responsibility for causing this hurt by saying there is a lockout," he added.

[The United Press reported Scotland Yard and Military Intelligence were understood to be investigating activities of Communist agitators in the strike and that court action was being considered.

[Strong hints that the Labor Government may soon declare a state of emergency and order troops to unload the ships also were reported by UP.]

Striking dockworkers contended the stoppage was a lockout because the dock labor board refused to call them for work until they had unloaded two strike-bound Canadian ships. The stevedores refused to work the Canadian ships involved in a jurisdictional dispute between the Canadian Seamen's Union and the Seafarers' International Union.

Prime Minister Attlee yesterday declared Communists were "instruments of an alien dictatorship" and are trying to ruin British recovery.

Isaacs declared the strikers "are in breach of their agreements and of the provisions of the dock labor scheme. It is nothing but a Communist maneuver to pretend that there is any other explanation of the positions."

Four Labor members of Commons conferred today with Home Secretary Chuter Ede and reported their findings during a waterfront investigation. They said they had gone aboard two Canadian ships and had found that the strike was "Communist-

Final Appropriations Push

Administration to Take On Bipartisan Economy Forces

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Administration's first major showdown with bipartisan economy forces is scheduled this week as Congress opens its final appropriations push.

Budget slashers got out their knives with a really threatening flourish after the Treasury reported a $1,811,440,047 deficit for fiscal 1949, three times greater than Mr. Truman had predicted.

Senate Appropriations Chairman McKellar (D., Tenn.) called a meeting of his full Appropriations Committee for Wednesday to determine the amount of an almost certain slash in hitherto sacrosanct ECA funds.

Senate Expenditures Chairman McClellan (D., Ark.) served notice that unless Senate Democratic policymakers agree to call up a directive to the President to make 5 to 10 per cent cuts in all 1950 appropriations, he will proceed independently, probably later this week.

With seven big money bills totaling more than 26 billion dollars still log-jammed, Congress chose the biggest for test pruning and opened a drive to clear all of them to the White House in two weeks.

The most delicate operation of all will come on Marshall plan funds. Smashing precedent, the House already has cut these from 4.2 billion to $3,568,400,000. But the House cushioned its own cut by authorizing the President to spend the entire amount in 10½ months.

ECA Administrator Hoffman agreed to go along on that basis, but warned the Senate committee in so many words it will have to look for another administrator if it cuts any deeper.

In the face of Hoffman's warn-

Conciliatory Tone Dropped

Bohemian Catholic Leaders Threatened by Government

Prague, July 4 (AP).—Communist Czechoslovakian government rulers, who yesterday spoke of "concessions" to Slovakia's fighting-mad-Catholics, issued new threats today against the church in the western province of Bohemia.

Two cabinet ministers touring Bohemia linked priests opposed to government policy with "counter-revolution." They accused some church leaders of serving foreign interests and said "reaction" would be "annihilated."

The speeches abruptly dropped the apparent conciliatory tone set yesterday by Premier Antonin Zapotocky. The premier visited Slovakia, where the government admitted Slovak peasants had fought Communist police to protect village priests, and appealed for "peace and calm."

The explanation of the conflicting statements in the two provinces appeared to be this:

In strongly Catholic Slovakia the government admitted the peasants were arming with clubs, scythes and other crude weapons to guard their priests. Government leaders were reported seriously concerned over the violence of the resistance.

In Bohemia clashes have been reported. Feeling apparently is not running so high against the state drive which church leaders claim is aimed at controlling the church.

The two cabinet leaders who issued warnings at a religious festival at Sazava, in Bohemia, were Minister of Education Zdenek Nejedly and Minister of Health Josef Plojhar, a suspended priest.

Nejedly, chief sponsor of the Communist-backed "Catholic Action" society, called on the priests to "take their places alongside the people."

"If they do not," he added

Taft to Map Tactics On Labor Measure

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) plans to confer with House Republican leaders this week on the chances of maneuvering the Taft labor bill through the House.

House Democrats, meanwhile, appear undecided on a course of action. Their plans may jell after Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) and Democratic Leader McCormack (Mass.) talk with President Truman.

The Taft bill, passed by the Senate last Thursday, would make a long list of alterations in the Taft-Hartley Act but preserve most of its important features and its essential philosophy of regulating both unions and employers.

Want To "Improve" Law

Taft and other Republican leaders want to be in the position of "improving" the Taft-Hartley law, or at least trying to.

The AFL and CIO don't want to give them that opportunity. The labor leaders, having abandoned hope of repealing the present law this year, prefer to keep it intact and fight the issue out at the polls in 1950. They say the Taft bill is too much like the Taft-Hartley act.

The coming talks between Republicans of both Houses were disclosed by Taft in an interview.

The Taft bill now goes to the House Labor Committee where it is unlikely to win approval.

In fact, the committee may not agree on anything. There seems to be not much incentive for pro-union Democrats to proceed in view of the unions' attitude. In addition, the pro-union members of the committee have long been in a deadlock over what sort of provision to write to cover "national emergency" strikes.

Some Kind of Bill Possible

If the committee approves no bill, that would have the effect of killing the Taft measure and leaving the Taft-Hartley Act on the books.

But it is conceivable that the committee, given a White House signal, might go ahead and send some kind of bill to the House floor.

If it does, then Republicans will be in a position to introduce the Taft bill as a substitute.

If the Taft bill should pass and go to the White House, labor leaders confidently expect a veto. That, too, would leave the Taft-Hartley Law untouched.

On the other hand, if the Taft bill should be defeated and the committee's bill adopted, a House-Senate Conference committee would try to write a brand-new measure.

Some Democratic members of the House Labor Committee don't seem to have entirely given up hope of following this course.

Representative Jacobs (D., Ind.) said in an interview he will keep working for a bill that the President could sign.

Jacobs, a labor lawyer from Indianapolis, has introduced a bill that is radically different from any other in the picture. Instead of having separate lists of "unfair labor practices" for unions and employers, Jacobs would make every bit of illegal conduct apply equally to both sides. "National emergency" strikes would be handled through the "unfair labor practice" procedure, with special provisions for speed in urgent cases.

Jacobs said he will insist that the Taft bill be read in the committee. Then he will attempt to amend it by substituting his own bill for it.

Draft Setup Asks Shift in Clinic Plans

The District Selective Service organization has recommended that the full-time alcoholic clinic program be placed in an abandoned school in the Southeast rather than the one where it has its own headquarters.

William E. Leahy, District draft director, conferred with Commissioner Guy Mason on the proposal last week and will meet this week with Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, clinic director, and Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, on the plan.

The draft staff has offices and storage space in the 63-year-old Weightman School, 23d and M sts. nw. The school was abandoned in 1942 and the District Space Committee has recommended the clinic be housed in the building.

No staff other than Dr. Wexberg has been named for the clinic because the District personnel office is completing specifications on the 12 positions authorized. Dr. Wexberg said he has candidates for 9 of the 12 posts.

If a headquarters is located and the job classifications are completed shortly, Dr. Wexberg predicted the clinic would go on a full-time basis about September 1.

D. C. Cigarette License Fee Cut Planned

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

District officials have reversed an earlier decision and decided to recommend low license fees for retailers, wholesalers and vending machne operators handling cigarettes after August 1.

An 18-page set of regulations on the new tax is scheduled to be placed before the District Commission today for final consideration.

The changed view of the annual license fees came after a discussion in which the regulations draftsmen agreed that the license was intended primarily for registration purposes, rather than for obtaining revenue.

Can Be Altered

The present plan calls for a $2 license fee by retailers; $10 by wholesalers and $1 per vending machine. These can be altered by the Commissioners.

An earlier schedule called for a $5 retail license fee, a $50 wholesale license and $2 per vending machine.

Handling of vending machines has raised a serious problem, according to Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson. Machine operators have requested a 15-day grace period in enforcement of the tax to permit them to refill the city's estimated 2000 machines with tax-stamped packages of cigarettes.

Aaron Goldman, president of G. B. Macke Corp., the largest vending machine operator in the city, said the only alternative to such a period would be to start selling city tax-stamped cigarettes before August 1, effective date of the tax.

Pearson said the changeover matter is undecided, but at present the rule is that all cigarettes offered for sale after August 1 without the city tax stamp will be seized.

Cigarette dealers have indicated they expect to pass on the 1-cent-a-pack tax to the consumers, although Goldman said the vending machine price on his outlets will remain at 20 cents for the present.

At a conference last week among Pearson, Superintendent of Licenses Chatham T. Nottingham and representatives of the Corporation Counsel's office, it was decided that wholesalers both within and without the District would be required to obtain licenses in order to sell cigarettes here.

In the case of chain stores, the group agreed that each unit will be required to apply for a retail license. Cashiers and cigarette girls who sell smokes in restaurants and night clubs will also be required to apply for retail licenses unless the establishment in which they are employed does so.

Pearson said 27 million decalcomania cigarette tax stamps are expected to arrive July 12 and distribution will begin shortly thereafter. Meanwhile, wholesalers have ordered metering machines for stamping an indelible purple tax marking on the packs. Automatic devices which slice open cartons, apply stamps and reseal cartons have also been purchased by wholesalers, Pearson said.

The 1-cent stamp for single packs will be blue; for 50s a 3-cent orange will be used, and for 100s a 5-cent green stamp will be attached. Wholesalers will receive 10 per cent discount on stamps for their trouble in attaching them.

Goldman said the discount would amount to 50 cents per case, about 30 cents less than the average paid for such service across the Nation. He said that at either rate, however, "no one will make a profit on the stamps."

When the cigarette tax starts here, Virginia will be the only nearby section selling cigarettes free of city or State taxes. Maryland already has a cigarette tax.

Meanwhile, applications for sales tax licenses are pouring into the District Building. Forms are available at all firehouses, police stations and banks and should be filled out and returned by July 12 to assure processing by August 1.

Sales tax regulations are expected to be completed within 10 days for submission to the Commissioners. Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent said he will then schedule meetings with commerce groups in nearby Maryland and Virginia to discuss collection of the "use" tax for the District.

Frankfurter Again Leads In Opinions

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Justice Felix Frankfurter once again was the opinion writing work-horse of the Supreme Court during the past term.

An unofficial compilation shows that Frankfurter wrote 45 of the 240 opinions turned out by the nine justices. Last term he wrote 40 of 215.

But three other justices wrote more of the court's majority—and ruling—opinions than did Frankfurter. Justice William O. Douglas wrote 20, Justice Hugo L. Black 19, Justice Stanley F. Reed 16 and Frankfurter 14.

An additional 11 Frankfurter opinions were oncurring ones, joining in the majority ruling. This was more than those of any other justice.

Frankfurter also led in dissents, writing 20 of the 90 turned out this term. Last term the total was 70.

Following is a table of all opinions other than 14 per curiam opinions (not signed by a justice) handed down in the 1948-49 term:

Majority rulings—Vinson, 10; Black, 19; Reed, 16; Franfurter, 14; Douglas, 20; Murphy, 9; Jackson, 10; Rutledge, 9; Burton, 7.

Concurring opinions — Vinson, 0; Black, 3; Reed, 0; Frankfurter, 11; Douglas, 5; Murphy, 1; Jackson, 4; Rutledge, 6; Burton, 2.

Dissenting opinions—Vinson, 4; Black, 7; Reed, 8; Frankfurter, 20; Douglas, 12; Murphy, 9; Jackson, 17; Rutledge, 8; Burton, 5.

Separate opinions—Douglas, 1; Jackson, 3; all other justices, 0.

Total opinions for 1947-48 and for 1948-49—Vinson, 13 and 14; Black, 23 and 29; Reed, 18 and 24; Frankfurter, 40 and 45; Douglas, 32 and 38; Murphy, 17 and 19; Jackson, 33 and 34; Rutledge, 28 and 23; Burton, 11 and 14.

In all, the Court this past term issued formal opinions in 114 cases compared to 110 the previous term. The 14 curiam opinions this time contrasted with 8 in 1947-48.

Junketeers Get Go-Slow Sign

By The Associated Press

Travel-minded House members may run into difficulty this year getting money to finance their junkets.

The "go-slow" sign was hoisted yesterday by Representative Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), chairman of the House Administration Committee, which handles miscellaneous House financing.

"Committees wanting money for their expenses will have to justify them," she told a reporter, and added "I have never considered a junket justified."

That doesn't mean, Mrs. Norton said, that thumbs will be turned down on every travel proposal that comes before her committee.

But it's going to be a tough job proving that there's a good reason for the trip.

Quite a few House members already are quietly contemplating trips to foreign climes after Congress adjourns. Europe, Asia, Alaska and the islands of the Pacific are on tentative itineraries, with Hawaii likely to retain its position as the main magnet for world-conscious Congressmen.

Almost every summer finds scores of Congressmen abroad, investigating, among other things, the problems of foreign aid, statehood for Hawaii, statehood for Alaska, the Berlin airlift and Army morale.

Not all the foreign travel comes under the heading of junkets. Some traveling committees return and vow that they will never go abroad again because they had to work so hard they couldn't see the sights.

Sworn In Maryland

Port Deposit, Md., July 4 (AP).—Carroll Campbell, jr., was inaugurated Governor of the American Legion's "Boys' State" in ceremonies today at the Bainbridge Naval School here.

The 17-year-old East Riverdale youth took the oath of office from Theodore R. McKeldin, former Mayor of Baltimore, before 222 high school delegates to the Legion's training in government conference.

Egress Code Drafting Starts Soon

Drafting of the long-delayed fire safety egress code for existing buildings will be started by the District Commissioners' Building Code Advisory Committee at a meeting July 11.

Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Hayes 3d, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, said the committee has completed editing sections of the building code covering egress requirements on new buildings and alterations in existing ones.

The sections are expected to reach the printers this week and will be incorporated in a reprinting of the entire building code. Other amendments enacted since the initial printing in 1941 will also be included, Colonel Hayes said.

The Commissioners' committee, which has been revising the entire building code, consists of representatives of the building industry as well as District government officials. A Hamilton Wilson, architect, is chairman.

The Commissioners decided last month to revise proposed egress regulations on existing buildings, but to continue those bearing on new structures and alterations. The committee has gone over these to remove inconsistencies and provide clarification before putting them in printed form.

Woll of AFL Asks Prompt Help for Nationalist China

New York, July 4 (AP).—Matthew Woll, chairman of the Free Trade Union Committee, today urged "prompt and adequate aid" to the Chinese Nationalist government.

Woll issued a statement outlining a 10-point "definitive constructive American policy to meet the crisis in China," in which he said, "We reject all notions and policies of defeatism in China."

Woll is second vice president of the American Federation of Labor, with which the committee is affiliated.

The statement called for non-recognition of and nonassistance to the Chinese Communists and asked for a United Nations Security Council study of the "entire question of the role of Russia in fostering and financing the civil war in China."

Also proposed was a special U. S. commission, on which labor would be represented, to prepare a program jointly with democratic authorities in Asia for applying President Truman's proposal to aid undeveloped countries.

5 Hurt and 13 Arrested In D. C. Firecracker Incidents

Five persons were injured one seriously, in fireworks accidents, and 13 persons were arrested in Washington and one in Maryland as result of possession or discharge of fireworks over the weekend.

Stanley, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith, 3286 Aberfoyle pl. nw., suffered first, second and third degree burns yesterday afternoon when a flare went off in his home and fell on him as he lay on his bed.

Mrs. Smith said the flare fell accidentally on a radio to which the boy was listening and was ignited by heat of the set.

It burned the boy on the arms and the middle and lower parts of his body. Rescue Squad 2 took him to Suburban Hospital, where he was reported in serious condition.

Phyllis M. Davis, 25, of the 1300 block of 21st st. nw., was treated at Emergency Hospital for abrasions of the right leg. Police said she was struck by a thrown firecracker at 19th and N sts. nw. Saturday. She was released after treatment.

Thirteen persons were arrested and booked in Washington for illegal discharge of fireworks. Each forfeited $5 collateral.

The names and addresses they gave, according to police records, are: Ivery Canady, 916 3d st. nw.; Clinton H. Collins, 476 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Andrew Price, 1884 Stanton terrace se.; Harold R. Kirby, 1622 Corcoran st. nw.; Charles E. Haywood, 2208 1st st. nw.; William E. Ford, 73 Bates st. nw.; Melvin Littleford, 1147 Massachusetts ave. ne.; M. R. Knight, 809 14th st. nw.; Robert J. Hoag, Fort MNair; Boyd L. Lyons, 1233 K st. se.; Joseph Nappi, 714 Longfellow st. nw.; Douglas W. Rehbein, 31 7th st. ne., and Willis Campbell, 2026 Georgia ave. nw.

Mrs. Rose Solomon, owner of a delicatessen at 606 Flower ave., Takoma Park, Md., was arrested yesterday on a charge of selling fireworks.

Police reported confiscating two cases of sparklers and "snakes" found in the store. Mrs. Solomon was released under $100 bond for hearing Thursday in Police Court.

Two-year-old Ronald Frey, son of A. R. Frey, 1849 M st. ne., fell on a firecracker and suffered first, second and third degree burns on his stomach. He was treated at Casualty Hospital and admitted to Children's Hospital.

Casualty Hospital also reported Mrs. Helen Olds, 22, was treated for first, second and third degree burns on her right hand after a skyrocket went off in her hand in her back yard at 1611 Rosedale st. ne.

Also treated at Casualty for burns on her right hand was Lillian Drury, a telephone operator, who told hospital officials that someone threw a firecracker at her in front of her house at 1120 C st. ne.

3 Maryland Girls Drown on Outings

Two young Towson (Md.) girls and a third girl from Baltimore were drowned yesterday on holiday outings.

The Towson children, Iona Peters, 12, and Florence Marie Koerner were wading hand in hand off Hart's Island at the mouth of Back River in Baltimore County.

Suddenly someone in the family party noticed the girls were missing. Outcries from the party caught the attention of a fisherman, who called an unidentified man in a power boat.

The boatman, aided by other fishermen, dived and brought up the children's bodies about an hour later.

The Baltimore child, Mary Lucille Wynne, 8, suddenly disappeared while wading with other children at Maryland Beach in Anne Arundel County. Her body was recovered shortly afterward.

Spirit of 4th And of 5ths Jams Lockup

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The lockups at Municipal Court were jammed yesterday with 269 prisoners in what was described as a near-record docket.

More than 190 were defendants in drunk cases, and the court stayed in session to dispose of their cases until almost 2 p. m. Usual holiday closing time is 12:30 p. m.

Numerous reasons were assigned for the upsurge in court cases. It was certain that the long weekend had something to do with it, and the warm nights of Saturday and Sunday contributed.

Judge Walter J. Casey took a look at the list before him and commented that police were apparently "diligent" in making arrests.

During the past month, Judge Frank H. Myers has been sitting in the D. C. branch where drunk cases are tried. He has been carrying out a policy of leniency toward inebriates. They are given one chance at freedom before him. If they repeat, he sends them to jail.

A court attache foresaw the return of prewar days when the list was large because unemployment and comparatively slim paychecks made it difficult for defendants to raise collateral.

Still another said that officers were cleaning up their precincts, having been encouraged by Saturday's heavy penalties as meted out by Judge George D. Neilson sitting in for the day.

Penalties yesterday ranged from personal bond to an average of $20 in fines and the severest cases were given 30 days straight jail time in drunk cases.

The proceedings were mainly serene. At one point, however, a prisoner in the lockup began preaching a loud sermon, but was soon quieted by guards.

Judge Nadine L. Gallagher presided in the District branch. Judge Casey handled Traffic Court and the overflow of the drunks. Judge Thomas D. Quinn sat in the United States Branch.

thereby placed themselves in the shadow of the gallows."

Those principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, he asserted, "have given birth to the most stable of the political and social systems devised by man."

"Its ideals have spread from this continent to Europe, Africa and Asia, all over the world. Under its influence the common man's lot has improved more in 17 decades than in the preceding 17 centuries.

"But because we pioneered the democratic way of life, the world looks to us for guidance. Any defection on our part will injure this cause throughout the world."

He drew from Abraham Lincoln a comparison to conditions today, quoting the Emancipator when he said:

"The shepherd drives the wolf from the sheep's throat, for which the sheep thanks the shepherd as his liberator while the wolf denounces him for the same act, as the destroyer of liberty. Plainly, the wolf and the sheep are not agreed upon a definition of the word liberty and precisely the same difference prevails today among us human creatures . . . and all professing to love liberty.

"Recently," Lincoln had said in 1864, "it seems the people have been doing something to define liberty, and thanks to them that, in what they have done, the wolf's dictionary has been repudiated."

Other Traditional Trappings

Besides the main events, last night's celebration had other traditional trappings of the old-fashioned American Fourth: audience singing of "America the Beautiful," procession of the colors, raising and lowering of the flag.

But the fireworks were the big show, a flock of aerial bursts vividly coloring the night sky. They ranged from a fire potrait of George Washington, calling up that original Fourth, to the "Screaming Dragons Breathing Fire," sending the small fry into the ecstasy that is theirs on this big day of the year.

Said General Devers last night: "By virtue of our present efforts to make American liberty and American peace the possession of peoples everywhere, we are really doing something to perpetuate liberty. And in so doing, the wolf's dictionary is again being repudiated."

Fireworks Climax

The fireworks came as the climax of the long evening of activities, sponsored by the District Fourth of July Celebration Committee.

The scores of thousands of Washingtonians looking on saw Niagara Falls by Moonlight, Venetian Gondola, Chinese Parasols, illuminated parachutes and an Alpine sunset.

There was The Prospector's Dream, with a discharge of a 12-inch bombshell, showing golden nuggets falling through the air.

The children gasped in excitement watching the "Electric Bombshills" breaking out 700 colored serpents against a background of blue and silver.

Perhaps more to be appreciated by the adults was "Girdle of Venus," described spectacularly but rather appropriately as "streams of unmanageable splendor, releases in the air from one 15-inch, three-break special bombshell, closely resembling Aphrodite's mythological cestus."

Aerial sirens "resembling the weird call of the ocean siren," as the fireworks authorities say, sounded through the air.

There were the Sun Ray Bombshell, Jewelled Jets, the Garden of Eden, Race of the Airships and enough color and bombing in the air to satisfy the greatest lover of fireworks—until the next Fourth rolls around.

10,000 Turn Out For Rock Creek Center Events

A crowd of 10,000 persons trned out to see a fireworks display last night at the Rock Creek Recreation Center on Beach dr. near the East-West Highway.

The firecrackers climaxed a day of celebration at the recreation center which began with a model airplane contest and included music by the Silver Spring Elks Band and the Silver Spring Kiwanis Band, races, eating contests, a greased pig chase, and a greased pole climbing contest.

The celebration was sponsored by the service clubs of Bethesda and Silver Spring, the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, and the Silver Spring Board of Trade.

Contest winners were:

up succinctly by Park Police: "Everybody seems to be hunting shade."

At the Washington Monument it was an average day for this time of year. Exactly 3075 persons had ascended to the top at 3:45 p. m., either to take in the view or take in what little breeze might be gliding around at that height.

In the evening, from the grounds below the big spire, came the two traditional trademarks of the Fourth—oratory and fireworks—as the District Fourth of July Celebration Committee staged a show.

Typical American Fourth of July celebrations went on at many places in the District and suburbs, with fireworks, bands, athletic events.

Commemorations ranging from the somber to the spirited were held in Arlington Cemetery, in the program of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants at the Old Union Engine House at 19th and H sts. nw., at District playgrounds, at Hyattsville in Prince Georges County, at Meadowbrook Recreation Center and Hillandale in Montgomery County and at other places.

Philippines Celebrate, Too

The day was also the third anniversary of the Philippine Republic. Philippine Ambassador Joaquin M. Elizalde noted.

"The Philippines," he said, "is the Oriental counterpart of American democracy."

He recalled the words of the late Manuel Roxas, first President of the Philippine Republic: "The freedom-lovng peoples of the world do not want war, but if war should come, I am certain of one thing — America and the Philippines will be found on the same sde."

Hiss Trial Is Going To Jury This Week

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

New York, July 4.—A jury of 10 men and 2 women this week will be directed to determine whether Alger Hiss or Whittaker Chambers is a liar.

For five weeks, in an oak-panelled room of the Federal courthouse on Foley Square, Hiss and Chambers, each backed by their own casts of supporting witnesses — including their wives — have squarely repudiated each other's testimony.

The short, fat-faced, 48-year-old Chambers has impassively recounted his charges that Hiss was an underground Communist in 1938, and channeled secret papers to Chambers for a Russian spy ring while Hiss served as assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre.

Mrs. Esther Shemitz Chambers, pale, gray-haired, bespectacled supervisor of the Chambers' 300-acre farm at Westminster, Md.—where Chambers hid some of the alleged Hiss' papers in a hollowedout green pumpkin — has staunchly her husband's charges of close relations with the Hisses.

In the wife-against-wife, and husband - vs. - husband drama, the lanky, handsome, 44-year-old Hiss and his 45-year-old wife, Priscilla —Bryn Mawr College graduate and teacher in well - to - do private schools—have completely denied the Chambers allegations.

Hiss, who left the State Department to become $20,000-a-year president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace on February, 1947, agrees to none of Chambers' testimony beyond the fact that he knew him from late 1934 until the summer of 1936.

Chambers' entire set of charges, Hiss says, is a complete fabrication; the motive unknown to him.

He knew Chambers only as a free-lance writer named "George Crosley," Hiss declares, loaned him small sums of money, gave him an old Ford roadster, sublet an apartment to him for several weeks, and then decided he was a "deadbeat" who would never repay him.

In a firm, deliberate voice, Hiss told the jury, "I am not guilty" to the two charges of perjury against him. These counts, each carrying a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment and $2000 fine, charge Hiss lied when he told a Federal grand jury December 15 that he had not seen Chambers after January 1, 1937, and did not pass him secret documents in early 1938.

Methodical, mustached Thomas F. Murphy, the 6-foot-4-inch prosecutor who weighs 230 pounds, has attacked the Hisses' testimony in a quiet but merciless manner. Several times he pressed Mrs. Hiss to the verge of tears as he challenged her testimony on how she disposed of the key exhibit in the case, a battered old Woodstock typewriter.

On this typewriter, the Government declares, were typed 64 of the copies of State Department papers which Chambers submitted for evidence. An FBI agent has so identified them, by comparing them with letters the Hisses admittedly typed on the machine.

The last Hiss letter, however, is dated May 25, 1937, and the Hisses, supported by testimony from two former handymen and a former maid, insist they disposed of the typewriter in late 1937—before the documents could have been typed on it.

What was probably the high point of the prosecution's case was the sensational testimony on June 16 by Henry Julian Wadleigh, former State Department economist, who freely admitted passing department documents to Chambers.

This, while not directly affecting Hiss' guilt or innocence, bore out that Chambers clearly had at least one "source" of documents in the Government, for Wadleigh and Hiss were among five persons accused by Chambers.

Weighed against this is evidence that several of the documents in Chembers' possession apparently did not come across Hiss' desk in the State Department, according to departmental records, and the defense has repeatedly sought to stress that the documents were available to dozens of other persons.

Also emphasized by the defense has been Hiss' "willingness" to "get to the bottom of this"; his admissions that four papers in Chambers' possession are in Hiss' handwriting; Hiss' many positions of high trust in Government, and his high character standing as opposed to Chambers' years of admitted Comunistic and earlier activity under false names.

To support Hiss' character, Supreme Court Justices Felix Frankfurter and Stanley Reed made an unprecedented courtroom appearancein his behalf. Further testimony to Hiss' character came from two former Solicitors of the United States and Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup, Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, and other distinguished citizens.

In cross-examination of Chambers and his wife, chief defense counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker, a master of courtroom histrionics, punched some holes in subordinate portions of the Chambers' testimony.

Prosecutor Murphy, who has left many of his points unclinched, said he will require a full day for summation—probably on Wednesday.

Loss of 30 Tons Of Uranium Oxides Told

Grand Junction, Colo., July 4 (AP).—The Grand Junction Sentinel says that 30 tons of uranium oxides which should have been delivered to the Atomic Energy Commission in the past two years have "disappeared into thin air."

Uranium is a basic element in the atomic fission program and is obtained from ore deposits in this area which are the only known ones in the United States.

The Sentinel says this loss has occured mainly at the Naturita, Colo., plant of the Vanadium Corporation of America where uranium-vanadium ores from the Navaho reservation of northern Arizona are processed. The paper in a page one news story blames the loss on inefficient methods.

In New York, Ward Miller, vice president of the Vanadium Corp., said he had not heard of any uranium oxide disappearance such as reported by the newspaper.

The story, written by Preston Walker, says engineers told the Sentinel that "in what they consider an outmoded proces of extracting uranium as a by-product of vanadium, a 10 to 15 per cent sider an outmoded process of expected." But, the paper reports, losses in the rich ore from the Indian reservation have been running at least 40 per cent.

This missing tonnage the Sentinel says "has caused more than a little furor in the bookkeeping office of the Atomic Energy Commission and its uranium licensing and purchasing agency in New York where every effort has been made to keep the loss from being made public."

Bedell Smith Sees Red Expansion Halt

Williamsburg, Va., July 4 (AP).—America's growing military might has halted Communist expansion in Europe, this Nation's former Ambassador to Russia asserted today.

Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, now commanding general of the First Army, assured a crowd of 1000 persons gathered for the formal opening of a restored eighteenth century arsenal that:

"It is our strength—actual and potential—and the realization that this strength has been growing that has halted, at least temporarily, the tide of Communist expansion in Europe, in the face of our determined opposition."

His words blended with a boom of an eighteenth century cannon and the swush of the United States Air Force's newest weapon, a squadron of F-86 Sabre jet planes that flew low in salute.

Before he spoke, the former Ambassador led and then reviewed a parade that moved from the Capitol Building of this restored colonial city to the restored magazine and guard house. Marching in the parade beneath a blazing sun were an Army band, a company of troops from Fort Eustis and a company of Marines from the Yorktown naval mine depot.

After his address, Smith turned over the key to the magazine to the captain of the Continental Guard and commanded him to open the arsenal gates. As the gates were unlocked, men in Continental uniform fired a cannon, surrendered by the British at Yorktown and four Sabre jets rocketed low above the crowd.

Smith said that "by constant reorganization, our armed forces are approaching the semblance of military strength, consistent with our world position and commitments.

"New training programs for our traditional reservoir of military strength, the National Guard and organized reserve, are beginning to produce units of trained citizen soldiers," he said.

Conditional Call to Leopold Indicated

Brussels, July 4 (U.P.).—Belgian Catholics, faced with a full-fledged political crisis only a week after their election victory, were reported ready today to call back King Leopold to the throne on condition he abdicate quickly in favor of his son, Prince Baudouin.

The Catholic Social Christian Party, according to a high Catholic source, hit upon the scheme to head off a general strike which Socialists in the labor movement threatened to call if Leopold returned.

The Socialists and the Liberals flatly refused to join the Social Christians in a government which would bring Leopold back from Switzerland to rule. The Communists called today for a common front of all parties, except the Catholics, to oppose Leopold's return.

Premier-Designate Paul Van Zeeland, leader of the Social Christian Party, which won the elections a week ago, was faced with the choice of forming a one-party government, or quitting.

If he formed a one-party government, it was touch-and-go whether he would get the necessary vote of confidence from Parliament to keep him in power.

Vishinsky Reported To Be 'On Way Out'

Envoy at Kremlin

Kirk Pledges He Will Seek Soviet Amity

Moscow, July 4 (U.P.).—Admiral Alan G. Kirk, presenting his credentials as American Ambassador, pledged himself today to work unceasingly to improve relations between Russia and the United States and to increase Russian-American friendship.

Kirk, successor to Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, presented his credentials to President Mikhail Shvernik at the Kremlin at 1 p. m.

First Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and the American charge d'affaires, Foy D. Kohler, among others, attended the brief ceremony.

Kirk described the ceremony afterward as an agreeable one and Kohler said that Shvernik was also "agreeable."

Kirk met members of the foreign diplomatic corps tonight for the first time at a gala full dress Independence Day celebration at Spasso House, his official residence.

Thirteen members of the embassy staff, in addition to Kohler, attended the Kremlin ceremony with Kirk. Six of them were military and naval aides.

French Train Wreck

Paris, July 4 (AP).—Heat-expanded rails today threw the Strasbourg-Paris express off the tracks, killing 5 or 6 passengers and injuring over 50 others.

New York, July 4 (AP).—Andrei Y. Vishinsky is on the way out as Russia's Foreign Minister, the United Nations World said today.

The United Nations World is a magazine devoted to international and U. N. affairs, but has no connection with the U. N.

In its July issue, the magazine says Vishinsky made an unqualified failure in his first crucial test as Soviet Foreign Minister and his standing with the powerful Politburo went to its lowest point. Quoting "the most authoritative diplomatic sources," the magazine said these two incidents during the recent Foreign Ministers Conference in Paris confirm the report of Vishinsky's fall from his high standing:

"1. Vishinsky, eager to have Stalin act as his pilot when the U. S.-U. K.-French diplomats thwarted his early optimism, failed to get through to the Soviet premier by phone, despite frantic round-the-clock efforts..

"2. On June 4, at a small and private dinner when Secretary of State Acheson was present, Vishinsky's customary aplomb was observed to be conspicuously displaced by uncertainty and anxiety. He conveyed the distinct impression that he was dissatisfied with his own performance in the diplomatic sphere and stated, in so many words, that he would prefer to devote his energies to his lifetime vocation, jurisprudence."

The magazine says Vishinsky in most diplomatic language hinted to French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman that the Soviet Union would welcome a French-Russian pact similar to the 1935 accord between Stalin and Pierre Laval.

The veiled invitation was said to mean Russia would dissociate herself as sharply as possible from activities of the French Communist Party if France would vote, from time to time at least, with the Russians in the Foreign Ministers Council.

The magazine said the offer never was directly made and Schuman never had a chance to refuse it outright, but that Schuman left no doubt France would remain in close association with Britain and the United States.

Schuman Confers In London; Gold At Danger Mark

London, July 4 (AP).—French Foreign Minister Schuman held hush-hush talks with British ministers today, as London newspapers estimated Britain's dollar and gold fund has been knocked down to $1,600,000,000, 400 million dollars below what was considered the danger level.

Schuman came here for talks on certain unspecified German problems, and organization of the Parliament of western Europe which meets in Strasbourg next month. An informant said Sir Stafford Cripps also gave Schuman a general idea of Britain's gold and dollar losses.

More Than West

U. N. Reports Big Red Gain In Production

Lake Success, July 4 (AP).—The United Nations published figures tonight claiming Russia and her satellies increased their industrial production more in 1948 than the Marshall Plan countries did.

The statistics were part of a 117-page section of the U. N.'s 1948 world economic report. The report goes before the 18-nation Economic and Social Council in Geneva Tuesday.

The figures are in most cases supplied by the individual governments. The U. N. makes no attempt to check them.

The increases on industrial production are shown in the following index (with 1937 output equaling 100):

Country	1947	1948	Gain
Austria	51	78	27
Belgium	86	93	7
Bulgaria	148	179	31
Canada	162	169	7
Chile	136	143	7
Czechoslovakia	83	98	15
Denmark	116	129	13
Finland	119	137*	18
France	85	99	14
Greece	66	70	4
Italy	85	89	4
Japan	25	33	8
Netherlands	91	110	19
Norway	115	125	10
Poland	109	141	32
Sweden	139	144	5
Russia	135	171	36
Britain	98	110	12
United States	165	170	5

The U. N. economists presented new warnings that a recession appeared to be beginning in the United States and other countries.

"The second half of 1948 and the beginning of 1949 appear to represent a turning point in postwar economic development," the report said.

"For the first time since the end of the war, there was a reversal in the upward trend of prices, a check to the expansion of production and some increase in unemployment in a number of countries."

The report said specific measures, both national and international, were urgently needed "to raise the world level of economic activity and to counter possible recession."

The U. N. economists again urged an increase in East-West trade as a means toward a better balance to European economy.

"Obviously," the report said, "an expansion of such trade might at once serve the economic development of eastern Europe and supply western Europe with some of the primary products which would otherwise have to be imported from other continents."

It pointed out that the lag in East-West trade had resulted in an increase in the trade of the Soviet satellites among themselves. It said the amount of trade among eastern European countries in 1948 was 288 per cent of that in 1938, while trade among the western European countries stood at 72 per cent and East-West trade at 42 per cent.

Here are some of the statistics on Soviet production in 1948:

Russia claimed her food production reached the prewar level, while many countries in Europe still were far below their prewar output.

In the production of fuel and power, Russia was the only major war-devastated country to reach prewar levels, according to the figures. Russia's production of electrict power in 1948 was 17 per cent above the 1947 figure as compared to a 13 per cent gain for the rest of Europe.

Russia's production of crude steel in 1948 was reported at 16,700,000 metri tons. This was more than any other country in Europe, but only about one-fifth the U. S. duction.

Russia turned out 270,000 motor vehicles as compared to 200,000 in 1937. The U. S. produced 5,285,400 as against 4,807,600 in 1937.

The U. N. economists did not say specifically that Russian production would continue to increase, but this was the implication in their general prediction for 1949. They said:

"The indications are that it will be difficult for general industrial output in Europe as a whole, exclusive of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, to increase as rapidly in 1949 as in 1948."

The report devoted considerable space to increasing unemployment throughout the world. A statistical chart showed substantial rises in the number of unemployed in the United States, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Western Germany, Hungary, Italy, Norway and Poland.

In the United States, the table showed, unemployment increased from 2,141,000 persons in 1947 to 3,017,000 in the first quarter of 1949. No information was available on Russia. The Soviet Union recently told the U. N. It had no unemployment problem.

Bohemian Priests Threatened

"they will reap the reward of people serving foreign interests. . . . Let them get out of here."

Speaking of the Communist coup which seized power in February, 1948, Plojhar said:

"The reaction was annihilated in February and the same will happen to any further kind of reaction, whatever cloak it may assume."

Only yesterday Nejedly spoke in a radio address of "concessions" in the state's campaign against the church. He said charges of persecution of priests were false and claimed the fullest religious freedom existed in Czechoslovakia.

Last Lithuanian Bishop Is in Hiding

Vatican City, July 4 (AP).—A Vatican source said today the last Lithuanian Catholic bishop has gone underground to continue his mission. Lithuania is now part of the Soviet Union.

The bishop is Msgr. Casimiro Paltarokas of Panevezys, near Kaunas. He had been permitted until recently to have some pastoral activity and to visit churches and the Roman Catholic of his diocese. Lately he has had to hide with an underground organization to continue his ministry, the source said.

The informant said the Archbishop of Kaunas, Msgr. Joseph Skvireckas, is living in exile in Austria and all the other members of the episcopate have either died or been deported to Siberia.

Catholics formed nearly 90 per cent of Lithuania's 2,500,000 population. Some 700,000 Catholics are said to have been deported to Siberia and their places in the country taken by Russian immigrants.

The Vatican source said approximately 1000 Lithuanian priests have been deported in the last three or four years, nearly all of whom are known to have died.

7.4% Drop Expected In Railroad Freight

The Association of American Railroads said yesterday that rail freight volume during the present quarter will probably be about 7.4 percent below the third quarter of 1948.

The forecast was based on estimates compiled by 13 shippers advisory boards in all parts of the country.

Repatriates Assist Japanese Communists In Disorderly Protest Against MacArthur

Tokyo, July 4 (AP).—Japanese Communists and Red-indoctrinated repatriates from the Soviet Union staged new disorders today.

The latest disturbances, at Kyoto, 300 miles west of Tokyo, coincided with the government's unpopular drive to balance the budget by firing 140,000 employes, mostly on the government-owned railways. Dismissal notices to 30,700 rail workers went out today.

While occupation authorities and government officials did not expect that the Reds would be able to do more than stir anti-American sentiments for the time being, it was clear that they were making hay busily in very bright sunshine.

[The United Press quoted published reports attributed to Senzo Higai, minister without portfolio, which said the Japanese cabinet was considering emergency action against the Communists, including "shoot to kill" orders to police.

[It reported the cabinet had met early Tuesday to consider the situation, with representatives of police and fire departments attending.]

General MacArthur's statement of Sunday, suggesting that Communism might well be outlawed, caused concern among some of his advisers, informed sources said. They feared that such a step would merely drive the Reds underground and gain them sympathy among the Japanese masses.

Some others of his circle, however, were said to favor outlawing the party as the only means of preserving order during the coming months of the big government retrenchment.

The Kyoto trouble began when a crowd of 4000, including about 1700 prisoners of war newly repatriated from Siberia, defied a police order against holding a rally on government property.

Kyoto is a junction point on the railway taking the repatriates from their port of entry at Maizuru. Special repatriation trains arrived at Kyoto throughout the day. The passengers refused to continue unless "democratic welcoming groups"—meaning Communists—were allowed inside the station and unless police dispersed.

One group of 200 Communists broke through a police cordon and led the first trainload of repatriates in a rally. Police arrested three men, but the repatriates forced their release.

Finally, trains out of Kyoto were cancelled, and late in the night the Communists and about 1500 police were facing each other outside the station, each playing a waiting game.

Atlantic Pact Debate Today

European opinion, east and west, has again been expressing doubts about the constancy of American foreign policy ,and on two grounds.

First, it is argued—chiefly by Soviet propagandists — that the American business slump is turning American interests inward and will weaken the American willingness to assume new commitments abroad. Secondly, it is being said that the relative peace and quiet of the recent Foreign Ministers' meeting in Paris has lulled the Senate into thinking a firm foreign policy is no longer needed.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, will try to dispel both these ideas in his opening speech, in which he will reaffirm the reasons why the pact was negotiated —to strengthen western Europe and to check Soviet power.

Although Senate opinion favors the treaty overwhelmingly, Administration debaters expect trouble over the 150-year-old issue of the President's power to use the armed forces in case of emergency, and without a congressional declaration of war.

The Foreign Relations Committee, in its report on the treaty, argued that the pact neither added to the President's existing power nor detracted from it. Senator George (D., Ga.), at one time wanted the Senate to add a reservation to the treaty on this point, and is reported not wholly satisfield with the committee's formula.

Long Speech Expected

The Georgia Senator is expected to make a long speech on the floor outlining his conception of the President's powers, with the intent of making a record that might restrain a future President.

Ratification of the treaty will clear the way for the administration to bring up a far more controversial proposal, but one the State Department regards as equally urgent. This is the program of military assistance for the Atlantic treaty signers and certain other countries.

Although the draft legislation has not yet been submitted, the Administration has announced that $1,130,000,000 in military aid would be sought for the treaty signers in the current fiscal year. This will have to be authorized by both the Senate and the House.

The start of hearings on the military aid program has been delayed until the Senate ratifies the North Atlantic treaty. The authorization bill is expected to provide for an advance of funds by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, so that actual appropriations would not be needed until the start of the new session next year.

Byrnes Asks U. S. to Keep Armed Vigil

Greenville, S. C., July 4 (AP).—Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes today reiterated his stand against a "welfare state" and called for a strong, active military establishment.

"We do not want the Federal Government regimenting our lives from the cradle to the grave," he told the convention of the South Carolina Department of the American Legion.

He said the Soviet Union has no intention of backing down in Germany in its cold war expansion program and predicted that the Soviets would follow a policy of rearmament and militarization in their sector of the occupied nation.

Hope was expressed, however, for peaceful settlement of differences short of armed conflict between the West and the Soviet Republic as he referred to the recent Paris meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers, saying "the recent conference cannot be regarded as having made no progress as long as there was an agreement for further conferences. So long as men confer about their problems, even if the language is profane, there is always hope of agreement."

He called for economic strength as one of the greatest bulwarks of America today. "We must remain strong economically," he declared. "Our first line of defense is not on the Rhine—it is a sound, safe American economy. That sound American economy is likewise the first line of defense of all democratic nations."

He declared the Federal Government is now taking tax money for welfare and social agancies from the States in which it could be put to a better advantage by remaining in the individual States.

He referred to a recent address at Washington and Lee University in which he had expressed similar views. He said, "it was interpreted by some as an attack upon an individual and a political party. I singled out no individual. I named no party. On the contrary, I said that each political party tried to out-promise the other.

"The persons who object to my views evidently do so because they advocate proposals in conflict with the general principles and policies I have discussed. That is their right. I disagree with them, and that is my right. For my views I have no apology. I do have a conviction that any man who is worthy of the confidence of the people must place loyalty to country above loyalty to any individual, any group or any political party."

Wallace Urges Defeat Of Treaty for Economy

Henry A. Wallace last night called on the Senate to reject the North Atlantic Pact. In letters to all members of the Senate, the former Progressive Party presidential candidate asserted that both this country and western Europe are faced with an "economic crisis"that would be worsened by heavy outlays for rearmament "which the pact requires."

Sensible Compromise

The chief officials in Washington's divided recreation set-up have sat down together and agreed upon a compromise that should end the jurisdictional conflict over the city's playgrounds, swimming pools and golf courses. This is a step they should have taken years ago. The trouble in Anacostia last week was a belated result of the friction that always develops when two governmental agencies working in the same field pull in different directions. Certainly logic as well as the consideration of good order and goodwill now demand that the city shall have one recreation policy and one agency responsible for carrying it out.

Secretary Krug made the suggestion on which the compromise is based. Chairman Wender of the Recreation Board and the District Commissioners have acquiesced, and the proposal will be taken up today by the board's by-laws committee. Mr. Krug asked that the local board repeal its by-law which requires continuation of segregation in the use of recreation facilities under its control. This would clear the way for the board to make effective the policy it recently enunciated—that of making every possible and realistic effort toward the removal of racial segregation consistent with "the public interest, public order and effective administration." In return for repeal of the segregation by-law, the Interior Department would turn over to the local board all the recreation facilities the department now controls.

The suggestion has the virtue of being a genuine compromise. It does not involve a half-way sacrifice of principle by both parties. Rather it sensibly calls for the accommodation of the two conflicting policies to the basic principles and practices which the public interest requires. It would establish nonsegregation as the right policy to be applied to play facilities in the Nation's Capital. At the same time it would make allowance for the fact that community mores cannot be changed over night. No less important is the consideration that the progressive elimination of racial barriers would be undertaken by a local agency that is in a better position than the Interior Department to keep a finger on the public pulse and to prepare the way for each reform instituted.

The chief question now is whether the Recreation Board will accept the Krug-Wender formula. We think there are many reasons why it should. That course would give it full control over the city's recreation facilities, which it has long been seeking. It would give the board an opportunity to inaugurate its new policy in accord with its own discretion subject to the constant impact of public opinion but without the confusion and friction resulting from the maintenance of a different Federal policy. Finally, of course, the board is under obligation to remove its segregation by-law anyway; for only by doing so can it give itself the flexibility that will be required to make a creditable showing under the new policy it has adopted.

Secrecy Myth

Dr. Karl T. Compton recently joined in the attack on the illusion that secrecy in scientific research is equivalent to security. His pertinent reminder has a special impact because Dr. Compton, as chairman of the Research and Development Board, cannot be charged with indifference toward the legitimate requirements of military security. He recognizes that some areas of information must be walled off, that this country cannot parade all its techniques before potential enemies. What he has done is to place this one facet of security in its proper perspective by stressing the no less important fact that secrecy and scientific progress are incompatible. "True security," he emphasized, "consists of being as far ahead as possible of any unfriendly competitor . . . If we simply sit tight and lock up our secrets, it will not be long before our active competitor forges ahead of us."

It is possible to detect in Dr. Compton's remarks some impatience at the various time-consuming investigations conducted by Congress. These investigations, however much their purpose may be perverted, are fundamental to democratic government, and the harassment that they sometimes engender is one of the prices of our form of government. What is needed is not scientific immunity from scrutiny, but, rather, more understanding on the part of the scrutinizers—in other words, a change of emphasis away from the petty cloak and dagger notion of national security to the solid scientific accomplishments in which security really lies.

All Or None

President Truman's all-or-none policy has come to full flower. After the Senate had completed the work of rewriting the Administration's labor bill, Vice President Barkley remarked that the only part left consisted of the first nine lines repealing the Taft-Hartley Act. Thereupon Senator Thomas made the rout complete by moving to strike out the first two lines of the bill and entitle it the Labor-Management Relations Act of 1949. He added that the pending bill, if as is unlikely, it is enacted, should be called the Taft Act of 1949. The real significance of the Senate vote lies in the resounding rebuke of the Administration leaders who attempted to make a political football out of a great economic issue—to force through Congress a labor bill that offered the public no adequate protection against crippling strikes and put all the emphasis on labor's rights without setting up safeguards against unfair labor practices.

The Thomas bill, it will be remembered, was reported out of committee without giving minority members an opportunity to have their amendments considered. It was President Truman's bill, written to satisfy the demands of organized labor for unconditional repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and reinstatement of the one-sided Wagner Act. From the beginning it was evident that the Congress would not support the bill in its original form. And in the course of the debate it became apparent that Administration leaders were opposed to amendments that would have stiffened it sufficiently to make it acceptable. The Senate, therefore, had to choose between a weak measure that satisfied nobody except the supporters of organized labor or the Taft amendments—the only comprehensive and coherent program presented to it. Although the bill that finally emerged was written from the floor in the form of amendments to the Thomas bill, it was in reality a complete substitute bill worked out in advance, providing for retention of the Taft-Hartley Act with modifying changes approved by Senator Taft.

It is virtually certain, as we have already said, that the Senate action precludes passage of any new labor legislation by the present Congress. The President would unquestionably veto any bill bearing the Taft imprimatur. From present indications the Taft-Hartley Act will remain unchanged on the statute books at least until a new Congress is elected. Only by sponsoring a constructive labor bill of his own could the President change the outlook, and there are no indications that he intends to alter his misguided course.

His attitude goes a long way toward confirming the suspicion that he hopes to keep the Taft-Hartley Act on the books as an issue in the 1950 congressional election and perhaps the 1952 presidential campaign. The uncompromising attitude of many labor leaders suggests that they, too, are thinking more of politics than of smooth relations between employers and employes. It remains to be seen whether this clinging to slogans at the expense of sound legislation will prove to be good politics a second time. Certainly it is not sound policy in a country that depends upon fair and amiable relations between unions and employers for continuation of economic prosperity.

Attack On Waste

The new Federal Property and Administrative Services Act, based on recommendations of the Hoover Commission, aims to coordinate and standardize the Government's civilian purchasing activities, to centralize purchases whenever possible, provide for more adequate control of inventories, prevent overstocking and insure prompt disposal and transfers of surplus property as well as more economical utilization of storage facilities. Owing to the lack of central direction of these operations, the Government's housekeeping methods are shockingly wasteful. The Hoover Commission pointed out that many purchasing offices are without competent personnel and their employes do not have the information or the cost records required to do an effective job. About half of the several million purchasing orders issued each year are for $10 or less, although cost of processing these small transactions amounts to considerably more than $10.

The commission also discovered that almost every Government agency had piled up excessive inventories—supplies sufficient to meet their needs for periods up to 50 years. These large excess stocks and the duplication of inventories necessitates use of an excessive number of warehouses, some of them located far from the point of use, entailing heavy transportation charges when goods are shipped.

President Truman has taken the first step toward reform of this chaotic system by instructing all Federal agencies, including those exempt from the provisions of the new law, to keep necessary stocks at minimum levels and avoid high-cost, small-lot purchasing. It will be some time, of course, before the newly created General Services Administration, which has taken over the Federal Works Agency, the War Assets Administration (in process of liquidation), the Treasury's Bureau of Federal Supply, the Office of Contract Settlements, and the National Archives, will be in a position to function as a coordinated whole and ready to establish uniform policies and purchasing methods. Meantime, the President's directive to heads of Federal agencies will expedite the work of reform at the agency level where cooperation is essential to attainment of the objectives of the new law.

There is a great difference between economies in Government spending brought about by reducing over-all appropriations and economies resulting from more efficient methods of operation. In the former case, economies are effected by curtailing or eliminating some governmental activities. That is the chief reason why budget-paring encounters such determined opposition. In the latter case, savings result from elimination of waste, and every reasonable individual realizes that wasteful Government expenditure is an indefensible imposition on taxpayers. Consequently, the effort to make the taxpayers' dollars go farther by reforming the Federal supply system is insured of the hearty support of Congress, the President and the public, regardless of whether they oppose or approve governmental spending on the present extended scale.

Fair Trade

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has acted on behalf of consumers in protesting the extension of a so-called fair-trade liquor law to the District of Columbia. Such a law would accomplish relatively little except to raise prices. In New York City, where a similar law recently was held unconstitutional, prices for the same brands are as much as $2 per bottle higher than in Washington.

Already the District is well protected against abuses arising from liquor sales; the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board acts as a policeman in checking on sales to minors, mislabeling, and the like. The proposed fair-trade law, under the Klein bill, would do nothing to increase these protections. Liquor dealers assert that, by setting minimum prices, the law would serve to iron out some chaotic competitive practices within the industry. This would be accomplished, however, by a sort of price-fixing that in all probability would exact a toll from consumers' pocketbooks.

The liquor industry in Washington is sharply competitive. There has, however, been no alarming increase in the number of bankruptcies. Here, as in most other industries, competition is the regulator that best serves the public interest. Washington fortunately has avoided fair-trade laws with respect to other products, and there is no convincing reason to believe that anyone other than the liquor industry would benefit from the current effort.

Clearance And Cleanup

Recently the House Appropriations Committee refused for the third year running to put any funds into District slum clearance and redevelopment. Two proposals had been made to Congress for piecemeal appropriations under the 20-million-dollar authorization for the District Redevelopment Land Agency. One, advanced by the Budget Bureau, would have allowed only $2,180,000 for the specific purpose of buying the Marshall Heights area for low-cost housing redevelopment. The other, made by Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, would have given the agency a five-million-dollar appropriation this year plus an equal amount in contract authorization for next year.

The House committee's action makes Senator McCarran's reaction to these proposals, however sensible, seem pretty wide of the mark now. He had said that both of them exemplify bad policy. The Senator believes, in the first place, that if Congress appropriates only a small portion of the whole authorization, it will never get around to doing more.

A second ground of objection to the piecemeal method voiced by Senator McCarran is even more persuasive. "Congress," he said, "should not be asked to pass upon the pro and con arguments of each specific area project." Here is common-sense speaking. Congress has more important things to consider than District slum-clearance projects or even District weed-control regulations. Let it appropriate the entire amount into the proposed revolving fund for expenditure by the redevelopment authorities as expert knowledge determines.

In the meantime, slum cleanup to remove health menaces could go forward to better effect if the Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings were given a staff of inspectors which could work jointly with the District Building and Health Departments. At present the Condemnation Board has a couple of inspectors lent part time by the Health Department. The result is that both have to skimp in their inspection and enforcement work.

Except in moments of slack loads, operation is on a "report" basis. This means that perhaps the worst house in a block of bad slums gets attention and improvement—and soon relapses. The "block" system applied in Baltimore—and here when workloads permit—brings a whole block of houses up together, raising the level of the area and creating, in place of hopeless apathy among owners and tenants, a spirit of competitive improvement.

HOT AFTERNOON

The cowbells in the distant pasture ring
Like water purling here into the spring.

The sounds are blended now and intertwine
Into a melody as cool as pine.

They are one placid woven sound that tells
Of ringing water, and of liquid bells.

Wrong Diagnosis

Avoidable errors in diagnosis are the greatest tragedies of medicine. In fighting for their respective national health bills Senator Taft and the Administration are headed for such a tragedy.

Senator Taft's national health insurance prescription is S. 1581. It provides complete medical care only for those unable to pay. S. 1679 is the Administration's Rx. Through compulsory taxation it provides complete medical care for all. Senator Taft insists the Administration's Rx is not insurance but socialization of the healing arts. It is not insurance because the cost to taxpayers has no solvent actuarial relationship to health risks assumed. It is socialization because through its taxing power the state assumes full responsibility for providing everyone with complete medical care. The joker in his reasoning is Senator Taft's belief: "The providing of free medical care for those unable to pay for it is not socialization."

Senator Taft's disagreement with the Administration is quantitative. Both would use tax monies to provide complete medical care for their respective beneficiaries. Senator Taft would use a means test to screen out the solvent. The Administration would simply eliminate the means test. As a practical politician Senator Taft must realize his Rx only invites conspiracy to make it universally available.

Both Senator Taft and the Administration have made a serious error in diagnosis. Health insurance should be responsive to actual need. That need for low cost self-help against bankrupting health hazards exists for 10 per cent of our people in any given year. Only one tenth of our people are hospitalized in the course of a year. Yet they bear 50 per cent of the total cost of medical care.

The Taft plan only helps that part of the 10 per cent who are indigent. The Administration's plan gives the fortunate 90 per cent the same priority as the 10 per cent bearing the bankrupting load of 50 per cent of all medical costs. The Administration admits the alarming shortage of doctors and hospitals. Yet it treats as equal need those unfortunates carrying many times the financial load of the lucky 90 per cent. Neither Senator Taft or the Administration are very realistic as diagnosticians.

Anti-Mask Law

The recent rash of klan outrages against Negroes and whites who have come in conflict with the klan's jungle code of justice should prompt us to reexamine our estimate of the seriousness of the klan threat.

Since the end of the war the klan has been bumbling along well outside the pale of respectability. It has been regarded as more of a nuisance than a danger. The recent outrages in several Southern States would indicate that the klan is making a new and terroristic bid for members and power.

It must be remembered that for several decades Georgia has been the seat of klan power. The basic klan organization today goes by the name of the Association of Georgia Klans, Inc. There is now, also, in Georgia a dissident splinter group, the Original Southern Klans, Inc.

Georgia klansmen in their hoods and regalia have been making incursions across State lines into neighboring Florida, Alabama and Tennessee. They have had some sucess in starting klan organizations in those States. If business conditions become worse and idleness and discontent mount, we may expect the scapegoating appeal of the klan to become ever more persuasive.

The interstate activities of the klan call for and justify Federal intervention. It is well that the FBI and the House Judiciary Subcommittee are investigating the Birmingham incidents. But Congress can do more. It can—and should—prohibit the passage between States of masked and hooded men whose terroristic history and associations are a threat to good order, safety and the free flow of interstate travel.

Some 15 Southern cities have adopted antimask ordinances within the past year making it a crime for klansmen to parade or congregate in public thoroughfares in their hoods. Among them are Macon, Columbus and Atlanta in Georgia, and Tallahassee and Miami in Florida. These ordinances are working.

A Federal antimask statute is a measure on which Southern liberals and conservatices could unite to show their abhorrence of klan terrorism. It would be particularly appropriate if a group of Southern Congressmen joined in sponsoring a Federal antimask bill at this session of Congress.

Negro Swimmers

One reason for the swimming tension at the Anacostia pool is that parents of colored children are growing tired of losing their children by drownings in Kingman Lake and Anacostia River. A recent report from the local chapter of the American Red Cross shows that of 111 persons drowned in Washington, D. C., for the four-year period, 1945-1948, 37 children, or 33.3 per cent, were of school age, 5-19 years.

Of the 37 children drowned, 29, or 79.9 per cent, were colored children who sought to escape the heat by swimming in the unsupervised waters of Anacostia or Kingman Lake. In all the area east of North Capitol st. there is not a single supervised swimming pool to which colored children may normally go.

In 1936, a survey was made of swimming facilities in Washington. Of 41 public, private and commercial pools, outdoors and indoors, only 6 were available for the colored population. Today there are only the pools at Howard University, Dunbar High School, and the Francis and Banneker pools to which colored citizens may go.

Help For Hawaii

With the story that the union has rejected the report of the fact-finding board in the Hawaii strike it seems even more apparent that help in this situation must come from the President and Congress. Also, steps must be taken to prevent recurrence of ruthless strikes which mean economic strangulation to the islands.

During World War II the American public became increasingly aware that Hawaii is a real and vital part of the United States. As such, the 540,000 Americans in the islands deserve whole-hearted support and quick action from their Government in this crisis.

World Police Force

President Truman has made two important declarations for world peace.

The first was published April 25, 1949, in a letter he wrote to Senator Elbert D. Thomas December 2, 1946, in which he favored—"a sufficient police force for United Nations to maintain the peace of the world" and then "world disarmament."

The second declaration is in his speech at Little Rock, Ark., June 11, 1949. He says: "I have discussed the three essentials of lasting peace—a strong and prosperous United States, a strong and prosperous community of free nations, an international organization capable of preventing aggression."

This prevention and "maintaining peace" necessarily require such national disarmament that no state could ever start war or aggression. Suppose the Soviets refused to agree to disarmament. The Truman answer is this:

"Such protection (of prosperity) depends on two factors. First, there must be constant efforts by all nations to adjust their differences peacefully. Second, there must be an agreement among nations to employ overwhelming force against armed aggression."

This Truman declaration is so strong that it could have an immediate influence for world peace. It could be made plain to the Soviets and all other governments. All of them could readily know or learn that the American people back the President heartily—if for no other reason than to have other nations join us in our own determined resistance to "armed aggression."

The other nations would be assured of their eventual security by the United States agreeing to join in such "overwhelming force." And this readiness for such an agreement by the other states would be a powerful influence on the Soviets for agreement on disarmament that would make resistance unnecessary. EWING COCKRELL.

"Our Bond"

In reading your timely and illuminating editorial of June 27, in which the unique and friendly position of our respective countries, Canada and the United States, is so aptly stressed, it has occurred to me that, perhaps, the enclosed lines, "Our Bond," by my mother, Annie Bethune McDougald, might be appropriate for inclusion in your columns.

Shrines and palaces totter and fall,
And the only thing that outlasts them all
Is words, of which books are made;
Words—written words can never die—
They're the treasury of the heart and soul.

Language is the subtle bond
That doth the years outlast;
Our mother's words, so dear, so fond,
Sweet memories of the past—
The childish prayers, the songs we sang;
Our joint heritage of noble Shakespeare's tongue,
Or some simple childish rhyme
Defies the eroding tooth of Time,
And the binding tie holds fast.

Since far off days of Bible lore,
On Shinar's ancient plain,
Language was rated a potent tie,
And ever 'twill remain;
Thus we've faced treaties, time and tide—
And today, as brothers, stand side by side!

Power In Politics

AN EXTREMELY interesting contest is shaping up that is bound to have political repercussions far into the future. The two leading figures could hardly have been more expertly cast for the roles they are playing.

On the one side is Leland Olds, whose reappointment to be a member of the Federal Power Commission precipitated the dispute. Powerful and influential men in the Democratic Party had warned President Truman that if he sent Olds' name to the Senate for confirmation for a third terms as a power commissioner, he would have a fight on his hands.

Olds is one of the comparatively few Roosevelt New Dealers to survive in the Truman Fair Deal. His concern with the regulation and public ownership of power goes back to his connection with the New York State Power Authority in 1931. He has the ardent support of former New Dealers and most of the Fair Dealers who tend to regard him as a symbol of the President's real intentions.

Probably Olds would never have encountered his present difficulty if he had not insisted that the Federal Power Commission, under a recent Supreme Court ruling, has both the right and the duty to regulate the production as well as the distribution of natural gas. That brought him into direct conflict with Senator Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma.

KERR HAS the expansive, genial manner of the self-made millionaire and the shrewd politician, both of which he is. He is equally at home in a Baptist pulpit or in the rough-and-tumble debate of Oklahoma politics.

The Kerr-McGee Co., which the Senator controls, is a large producer of natural gas. Kerr also has close connections with the Phillips Petroleum Co., probably the largest single producer of gas.

This, as Kerr knows very well, makes his position a vulnerable one and especially in view of his ambition, which does not stop short of the Presidency. The most effective line that Kerr takes, both publicly and privately in his efforts to line up Senators against Olds, goes as follows:

"The Southwest has a great natural resource with its gas. It can sell that gas and raise the standards of everybody. But now comes the Federal Government saying that the sale of this resource must be regulated.

"That gas goes to produce the automobiles and the tractors and the other things that we in the Southwest must buy. The production and the sale of the things we buy are not regulated by the Federal Government. So why should we, the hewers of wood and the drawers of water, be discriminated against?"

OLDS HAS what seems to me an effective answer to this argument. He points out, and it seems to be generally agreed to by both sides, that if Kerr's bill to take gas production out of regulation is passed, then the price of gas will go up.

This would mean that industries seeking to locate in the Southwest because of the advantage of a low-cost, readily accessible fuel might be stopped from seeking a Southwest location where there is already a freight-rate disadvantage. Consequently, the Southwest would continue to be a supplier of raw materials to the industrial Northeast—hewers of wood and drawers of water.

Lined up with Kerr, as might be expected, are the utilities. With Olds defeated, they see a chance to get a power commission majority with a far more lenient, States' rights point of view.

Some Senators seem to have been given the impression that President Truman is indifferent to the fate of Olds, having made a gesture of sending up his name. But members of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee are discovering that that is not true.

The Democratic members are being canvassed personally by Clark Clifford, counsel to the President. They say that seldom has such zeal been shown in behalf of a presidential nominee.

After waiting three months, Chairman Edwin C. Johnson has at last called committee hearings on the nomination of John Carson to the Federal Trade Commission. When that is out of the way, action on Olds is expected, with the likelihood that his name will be reported favorably.

But that will be merely the prelude to a battle on the Senate floor. Kerr is not easily stopped once he sets out on a course. And, meanwhile, Olds' term as a commissioner has expired and he is out of office, which his enemies may count at least a temporary gain.

Central High School

As a graduate of the class of 1889, and a native of the Capital, I add my protest to the movement regarding Central High School, a much beloved institution to all who have spent finishing years within its walls.

With a group of students from around East Capitol st., I entered Central in 1886; even today I can feel the pride with which we walked the corridors of that fine building, then our only high school.

But the heartbreak I experienced as I rode past one day to see its appearance and apparent neglect! Keep Central as is for the thousands of us who still revere her.

Arab Refugee Aid Requires U. S. Funds

By The Associated Press

Administration officials plan to ask Congress for more money to aid an estimated 800,000 Arab refugees from Palestine, it was learned yesterday.

The officials fear riots and bloodshed in the Middle East unless new funds are found to extend the United Nations relief and resettlement program into at least a second year.

President Truman is reported to be familiar with the need for funds, and is anxious to solve the problem which he considers the most pressing in the Middle East.

The present 32-million-dollar fund is scheduled to last only through August, although officials hope that by economizing they can stretch the aid into December, especially the emergency feeding programs.

The refugees are scattered through Egypt, Transordan, Syria, Lebanon and Arab Palestine, living in makeshift camps supervised by United Nations personnel and some private American agencies.

Congress authorized a 16-million-dollar contribution as the United States' share of the first year's operations. Actually, the United States has provided only 12 million dollars because Congress specified other nations must contribute their share before the full amount was made available.

The size of the projected second contribution by the United States has not been decided. Officials working on the problem foresee the need for at least 15 million dollars from the United States since the emphasis in the new program would be on more expensive resettlement activities, instead of mainly relief.

The additional money will be necessary, it is said, even if Israel consents to permit a substantial number of refugees to return to their former homes in Palestine—something the United States is pressing the Israeli to do.

Some of the new funds would be allocated to the Israeli government to help defray the cost of settling its share of the refugees, perhaps 250,000.

The biggest part of the money would go to Trans-Jordan and Syria, which have expressed willingness to accept most of the other refugees, if they get financial assistance.

The State Department already has started sounding out Britain, France, Canada and the wealthier members of the United Nations to determine how much they can chip into the next fund.

Some Government officials believe the refugees would have no alternative but to plunder the countryside for food if the United Nations stopped its relief work in the next few months.

extension ladders, based on a small rock in the middle of the stream, to reach her. Jackson tied a rope around Miss Treml's waist, and she crawled on hands and knees over the teetering ladders to safety.

Her first words to her waiting roommate, Miss Sara Pittard, 24, were: "I'm all right." Then she hugged her fiance, Peter Robinson of the Dupont Plaza apartments, an attorney.

The worst part of the whole experience, she told a reporter, was "waiting out there while all those men risked their necks for me." Miss Treml is a secretary to Bert Andrews, chief of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington bureau.

To reach her, firemen directed by Fairfax Volunteer Chief John Carper had to erect a ladder "mast" to support the out-thrust tip of the final ladder bridge as it wavered toward the island.

According to Miss Pittard, she and Miss Treml had gone to the park with a group of young people. About 4 p. m., she said, the two of them left the others and began walking on the rock-bound shore near the "spout."

They separated for a time, Miss Pittard said, then "I called to her. She came toward me. She had her hand on a piece of rock. She was wading in shallow water near the bank. I guess it was slippery because she suddenly lost her footing and fell in."

Last May two Georgetown University students were rescued from a spur of jagged rock where they had sought refuge to escape being swept into the falls.

The students, James Hurst and Henry Owens, each 18, had also intended to "shoot the rapids" returning from a canoe trip in the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

Baltimore Base Proposed for Air Reserve

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Langley Field, Va., July 3.—Establishment of a $1,200,000-a-year training base at the old Baltimore Municipal Airport to provide weekend training for 2000 District of Columbia and Maryland Air Force reservists has been recommended by Maj. Gen. William D. Old, commander of the Ninth Air Force.

Old, who is in charge of USAF Reserve activities in the Middle Atlantic area, told The Washington Post that consideration had been given to both Andrews and Bolling Air Force Bases as sites for such a training center. Both, however, were ruled out when it was found that the fields now are overloaded handling existing Regular Air Force units.

Conditioned on Ramp

The plan to set up a training center in Baltimore was submitted to the Department of the Air Force in Washington. It is conditioned upon the construction of a ramp.

As no funds are provided for construction with the new Reserve program, the City of Baltimore would have to construct the ramp and rent it to the Air Force. Old estimated the cost at $150,000 if concreate and less than $40,000 if steel matting were used. Either would be satisfactory, he indicated.

Cost of operating such a training center would run about $100,000 a month. If approved, a tactical wing of four squadrons, totaling some 2000 officers and men from Washington, Baltimore and other communities in the area would be organized. Airplanes would be assigned to it by the Air Force.

2 Days Each Month

One squadron, plus supporting ground units, would report to the base each weekend—giving all units two days training a month. Camp Holabird, Md.—not far from the airport—would house and feed the reservists, under the plan. The old British Overseas Airways Corp. hangar would be used at first. Later when the Maryland Air National Guard moves to the new Baltimore Airport, the Reserve wing would take over their hangar.

The Baltimore project is part of the new, expanded Air Force Reserve training program which went into effect elsewhere in the country on July 1. Due to lack of an airfield, only a few ground units were activated in the Washington area yesterday.

General Old said that three weather and tower units were activated in Washington. The largest, 31 officers and men, is at the Fort Myer radio station. Another—to have 10 officers and 108 men—was set up at Camp Detrick, near Frederick. Another Reserve unit (Military Air Transport Service) of 55 officers and 200 men is planned for either Andrews or Gravelly Point.

Actually Curtails Training

The expanded Reserve training program just going into effect actually results in a curtailment of training activity in the Washington area. Some flight training was carried on at Andrews under the old program, which has been discontinued.

"The new program," said General Old, "is designed to give the maximum results for the money available. We have no funds for construction, so we must concentrate our training in highly populated areas where there are existing airfield facilities."

Thus Philadelphia, Washington, all of West Virginia, and Baltimore—for the present—will be entirely without flight training facilities despite the presence of large numbers of reservists who would like to participate. Richmond has the facilities, but not enough reservists for a training center.

Richmond fliers must travel to this base for their weekend flying, the reservists in Philadelphia have to go to Reading, Pa.

sailboats capsized, and another while swimming during the storm. The fourth, a 9-year-old boy, was blown from a rock beside Central Park Lake, fell into the lake and drowned.

Several small planes got into trouble in the wind, which whipped up such a dust storm at La Guardia Field that traffic was halted 10 minutes. However, nobody was killed.

A seaplane made an emergency landing near a small skiff, slightly injuring two women and sinking their boat. The pilot, uninjured, said he hadn't seen the boat.

Throngs on the streets scurried for cover as sunlit skies suddenly turned dark, showers broke and winds whipped the holiday flags that decked the city.

Millions at beach and other resorts also took cover.

Although hundreds of pleasure boaters were thrown into the surrounding waters by the winds, most were quickly rescued. Owners of larger private craft joined harbor patrol boats to search the waters for victims.

But the cost was incalculable in loss of small boats, and in loss of gear and damage to those which were salvaged.

In other areas trees and telephone poles blew down, cutting off some power lines and in two instances injuring picnickers.

A Coast Guard plane circled a Long Island Sound area where a man was last seen in the water, clutching his 8-year-old son in his arms.

A rescue craft threw him a life preserver but was driven off by high seas before it could rescue the pair.

Boats also searched for a man, his wife and child, last seen when their ketch capsized in Long Island Sound.

At New Rochelle, a man was still missing hours after a boat rescued his wife and child from their capsized craft.

A 13-year-old girl suffered scalp wounds when she was blown from a park bench and struck her head on the edge of a swimming pool.

Heat, Drought Plague Most of the Nation

By The Associated Press

From the Western mountain slopes to the Atlantic Coast the Nation yesterday suffered from the heat and drought.

Only on the West Coast and along the Canadian border did the sun turn kindly. Coast temperatures ranged btween 60 and 80.

There was rain, also, that held down temperatures in a few sections and there was a thin edge of an entering Canadian cool air mass that brought heavy rains as its advance guard. At Mellen, Wis., 7.77 inches fell in 4½ hours, causing a damageless flash flood on the Bad River. There were showers in Utah and along the Gulf Coast.

And the Canadian air boded some relief for other sections before they return to work Tuesday—or before they go home Tuesday night.

But otherwise it was hot. For the most part records were not set—that came Sunday—but they were equaled. Boston hit 100 for the second time since 1944; New Jersey 102.

It was similar in Chicago, where the mercury stayed below Sunday's 102.4 peak.

The heat had another by-product—heat that was good for moist Midwestern corn burned dry New England. In New Jersey 43 days of no rain cost truck farmers and potato growers a half-million a day.

Italian Seamen End 17-Day Strike

Rome, July 4 (AP).—Italian seamen ended their 17-day strike today. More than 4000 passengers bound for New York and South America had been stranded by the walkout at the height of the tourist season.

Shipowners said the strike cost them 2 million dollars in lost business.

Union members won a 200 per cent increase in pensions, a $5 a month unemployment benefit bonus and a definite hiring schedule under an agreement signed with ship owners.

Student Is Stranded 4½ Hours on Boulder

A 22-year-old engineering student at George Washington University was stranded on a rock near Little Falls, Md., for 4 hours and 35 minutes yesterday after his canoe was wrecked on the boulder.

The youth, Royce Latham, of 1938 Calvert st. nw., was finally hauled 40 feet to shore through the swirling waters that dashed about semi-submerged rocks, Pvt. James W. Shepherd of the harbor police who tossed him a line.

A companion, Kenneth A. Tomlin, 18, of 1932 Calvert st. nw., had been hurled from the canoe a few minutes earlier when the craft sideswiped another rock as the youths attempted to shoot the rapids.

This was only a few yards from the shore. Tomlin swam to safety. After the canoe cracked up, he made his way to Fletcher's boathouse, 5 miles away for help. Early attempts to get Latham off the rock failed and harbor police were called. The youth was rescued at 8:35 p. m.

Harbor police said the accident probably saved the lives of both canoeists. They were headed, police said, toward a 20-foot drop 900 feet above Little Falls at a point where an ensign met his death during the war.

3% Social Security Tax Plan Drafted

By The Associated Press

Congressional drafters of new social security legislation were reported yesterday to have agreed tentatively to let payroll taxes treble in 15 years. They also would bring about 12,000,000 more persons under old age insurance.

Definite decisions had not been made, but the House Ways and Means Committee was understood, after weeks of closed door sessions, to have drawn a rough draft of legislation which would:

1. Let the payroll taxes, now 1 per cent against employes' pay and employers' payrolls alike, increase January 1, 1950 to 1½ per ent on each, and on January 1, 1952, to 2 per cent each. This is now provided by law. The new proposal would add provisions for an increase to 2½ per cent in 1960 and to 3 per cent on each in 1965.

2. Add 12,000,000 to the approximately 30,000,000 persons already covered by old age and survivors insurance. President Truman requested that coverage be extended to 20,000,000 more. The committee appears willing to extend coverage to the self employed —such as doctors, lawyers, businessmen—to household workers, and several smaller categories. But it has not put farm operators and farm workers among those to be blanketed under the insurance.

3. Boost benefits under the insurance program, probably by more than 50 per cent, to meet increased cost of living. Payments to insured persons over 65 now average about $25 a month. This probably would jump to $40 or more.

4. New disability insurance payments, meaning that insured persons who become totally and permanently disabled would draw benefits just as though they had reached the retirement age.

Some five million self-employed persons may be required to pay social security taxes one and one-half times greater than other classifications of covered employes.

The 30 million persons now insured pay one per cent of their first $3000 of annual income, and their employers pay another one per cent for them. The self-employed, having no employer to match their contributions, might be required to pay 1½ per cent, at the present tax rate.

A new social security bill may be presented by the committee to the House within two weeks, but there is little, if any, prospect that Congress will act upon it before next year.

Social security expansion is one of the major points in Mr. Truman's domestic program. The Republican 1948 platform also called for broadening of the program.

The Ways and Means group still is doubtful of any feasible means of bringing farm operators and farm workers into the covered class. Members point to the problem of determining the level of farm operator income for tax purposes, the fact that many farm workers have several employers within a year, and the barrier of forcing farm operators to keep accurate employment records on hired workers.

'To End Poverty'

Townsend Clubs Start New Party

Columbus, Ohio, July 4 (AP).—The national convention of Townsend Clubs voted unanimously today to establish a new political party.

The objective will be "the abolition of poverty in America" through the Townsend plan, under which every person 60 years of age or older would be paid a pension of approximately $156 a month.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, 83-year-old founder and president of the clubs bearing his name, personally offered the proposal.

He was given a 10-minute ovation and then the approximately 5000 delegates adopted the resolution unanimously.

The resolution said Congress does not seem "to be competent in determining the cause nor the cure of depressions" and that insurance against another depression is "imperatively demanded."

A spokesman said the Townsend Clubs would proceed immediately to lay the groundwork for the new organization.

A bill to set up the Townsend pension plan is pending in the House Ways and Means Committee. Funds would be raised by a 3 per cent gross income tax on business and on salaries above $250 a month.

A Lake City, S. C., truck driver and a 19-year-old man of the 3100 block 9th st., N. Arlington, admitted to Gallinger Hospital Sunday as polio suspects, were still under observation last night. Should they prove to have the disease they would bring to five the number of such cases reported here this year.

Constance is the third youngster to be treated with the new drug at Children's Hospital in the past four months

Architects Oppose New White House

The American Institute of Architects has gone on record in favor of restoring the White House instead of rebuilding the structure.

Horace W. Peaslee, Washington architect and chairman of the Institute's Committee on the National Capital, announced Sunday in a radio interview his committee is unanimously opposed to an entirely new building.

"That kind of savings would entail too great a loss of heritage," Peaslee said.

He quoted other members of the committee as follows:

Oscar Stonarov, Philadelphia: "It's impossible to think the people want an ersatz White House . . ."

Maynard Lyndon, Los Angeles: "To imitate it or to rebuild it in replica out of economic expediency would be truly a farce and a never ending comment on our period . . ."

Henry R. Shepley, Boston: "The original fabric of the White House should be preserved at all costs."

Youthful Parolee Accused of Taking Car for Joyride

A National Training School parolee was charged in Municipal Court with breaking into an automobile sales company yesterday and stealing a 1940 Lincoln for a two-hour joyride.

He is Richard M. Hodgson, 2401 22d st. ne. The case was continued until July 11 with bond at $1500, to have Hodgson's age checked. He claims to be 17, but police records show him as 18.

According to Precinct Detective Joseph D. Loughrin, the automobile was traced to Hodgson after it and all the keys to cars on the lot of the Dunn Motor Sales Co., 2410 Bladensburg rd. ne., were stolen.

Loughrin said fingerprints on the automobile matched those of the defendant.

Two Kentuckians To Go on Trial In Voting Fraud

Lexington, Ky., July 4 (AP).—Selection of a jury will begin Tuesday in Federal District Court for the trial of two Lexington attorneys indicted on a charge of conspiracy to force ballots in the Bourbon County general election last fall.

Sixty prospective jurors have been summoned for the trial of E. F. Prichard, jr., 34, and A. E. Funk, jr., 27, law partners.

They were indicted in connection with election irregularities last November, when 254 ballots identified as forged were found in 11 precincts.

Prichard was associated with several key officials in Washington during six years with the Government in various capacities. He is a former counsel for the Democratic Party. Funk is an assistant city corporation counsel here, the son of Kentucky's Attorney General.

Human Factor In Air Speed Is Stressed

The human factor still will determine the speed for military planes of the future, research physicists were reminded last week.

Rear Admiral William S. Parsons, a member of the National Military Establishment Weapons System Evaluation Group, passed on the warning to some 150 members of the Fluid Dynamics Division of the American Physical Society meeting at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.

"In the case of manned aircraft, increased speeds made possible by jet propulsion have produced combat situations which change so fast that human perceptions and reflexes are inadequate," Admiral Parsons declared.

"While electronic perceptions, mechanical computers and servomechanisms can handle split-second decisions, there is as yet no replacement for human determination, resourcefulness and judgment.

"Until we can stereotype the combat situation with a satisfactory degree of assurance we must still accept the severe limitations imposed by the tender, oxygen-breathing, pressure-sensitive pilot."

Tuck Stands On Record of Labor Laws

Strasburg, Va., July 4 (AP).—Governor Tuck today defended the workability of the State's right-to-work and utilities labor relations laws and called upon "those who oppose these acts to speak up and make known how they propose to protect the rights of the people of Virginia."

The governor's words were a reference to one of the top issues in the current campaign by the four candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. He spoke at ceremonies marking completion of the John Marshall highway between Strasburg and the West Virginia line.

"I am not deluded by all these cries concerning Virginia's governmental services," Tuck said. "Much of the tumult is raised to camouflage and gloss over the real question."

He said Virginians are given the right to work whether or not they belong to a labor union or other organization, and added:

"This administration has stood firmly and will ever stand firmly for law and order, and for the continued and uninterrupted operation of all our essential public utilities so vital to the public safety, health and welfare . . .

"These statutes and their observance have proven of great benefit to the working people of Virginia, to management, and especially to the citizens of Virginia at large. Let those who oppose these acts speak out and make known how they propose to protect the rights of the people of Virginia.

"I stand upon my record in this respect, and in every other regard, unashamed, unruffled and unafraid."

South's Building Is Reported Up 3 Pct. This Year

Baltimore, July 4 (AP).—Spurred by public building and industrial construction, the value of work contracts in 16 Southern States during the first half of 1949 increased 3 per cent over a year ago, the Manufacturers Record said today.

The $1,427,120,000 in contracts compared with $1,382,278,000 for the first six months of 1948, the Record reported.

June award values for work below the Mason and Dixon Line also increased. June's $278,293,000 total was almost 13 per cent over June, 1948, and 1 per cent over the $276,224,000 value placed on contracts in May, 1949.

Lightning Wires Placed on Trees At Mount Vernon

Trees planted by George Washington at Mount Vernon have been wired as a protection against lightning, the Westinghouse Electric Corporation reported yesterday.

Using the lightning rod principle of Benjamin Franklin, wires are run up the trunks of the valuable trees to conduct lightning harmlessly into the ground.

However, the public is warned not to stand under a "wired" tree during an electrical storm. The tree will get the direct lightning stroke, but the person may get a "side flash," the company said.

29th Division Reunion Set

The Twenty-ninth Division Association will hold its annual reunion here September 2-5.

In addition to business meetings, the four-day reunion will feature two dances, a banquet and a buffet supper during which War Department movies of the "Twenty-ninth" in action during World War II will be shown.

To honor the nearly 500 Twenty-ninth Division dead buried in Arlington National Cemetery, Maj. Gen. Charles H. Gerhardt, who commanded the division in World War II, will lay a wreath September 4 on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and another on the grave of Maj. Gen. Charles G. Morton, the division's World War I commander.

Showdown Set On Economy

ing, Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) who tangled with the administrator in committee, last night proposed a straight 800 million dollar cut in ECA funds, without the House cushion.

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), said he will press for the $740 million slash proposed by the congressional "watchdog" committee staff, likewise without a cushion.

Republican Senators, who may hold the controlling vote, will plug for what they term a "non crippling" cut that would enable Hoffman to feel he still could do the job."

62 Signed Petition

National defense appropriations, which the House increased slightly, may come in for the biggest single bill reduction of all, but the showdown may be delayed until next week. Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), chairman of the subcommittee handling military appropriations, is out to slash the bill by a billion dollars.

With 62 Senate petition signatories, McClellan's resolution directing the President to cut total appropriations 5 to 10 per cent has been solidly indorsed by Senate Republicans.

Last night McClellan predicted that many Democrats will get behind a similar proposal in the House. House GOP Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) sponsored the House measure directing the President to make cuts.

A round-robin petition by Martin last week gahered 107 House GOP signatures. McClellan voiced regret it wasn't handled on a "bipartisan" basis by Democrats and Republicans alike as in the case of the Senate bill.

McClellan, who last week requested the Senate Democratic Policy Committee to schedule early action, said he will "feel obligated" to go ahead on his own if the policy committee turns him down at a meeting today or Wednesday.

In that event, McClellan said two courses of action are open to him:

1. He can move to call up the resolution in the Senate. With a majority of the Senate already signed up for his resolution, it has a bright chance to win in that chamber, but it might never come up in the House.

2. McClellan or one of his associates can move to tie it to one of the big appropriation bills as a rider. Since legislation normally is barred in a money measure, this would require a two-thirds vote. But if it wins in the Senate as a money rider, it would be sure to reach the House by the conference route. And to veto it, the President would have to strike down vital appropirations.

Under questioning last week by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), McClellan indicated he would be willing to exempt ECA or any other agency Congress already had trimmed back 5 to 10 per cent.

Senate Administration Leader Lucas (Ill.) consistently has opposed the measure, but may yield to the wishes of his policy committee. Lucas argued that Congress should do its own cutting and not "pass the buck to the President."

Taylor Gives $50,000 For Italian Children

Rome, July 4 (AP).—Prime Minister Alcide de Gasperi's office disclosed today that Myron Taylor, President Truman's personal envoy to the Vatican, has made a personal gife of $50,000 to charity for children.

The Premier's office said half of it will be used for children mutilated during the war and the other half will go to the Italian Red Cross for children.

President Ends Weekend Cruise On Williamsburg

President Truman returned to the Capital yesterday afternoon after a holiday cruise aboard the presidential yacht Williamsburg, during which he studied a report from his Council of Economic Advisers.

Mr. Truman was accompanied by his daughter, Margaret, and her guests, Drucie Snyder, daughter of Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, and Jane Lingo, daughter of Comdr. Harrison B. Lingo.

The Williamsburg left here at 10:30 a m., (EDT), Saturday. Mr. Truman spent the Fourth of July weekend sunning himself on deck, relaxing and preparing for his semiannual economic report to Congress. It may be submitted within a week.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

TAGGING SOME OF THE BASES:

Even sorrier than the collapse of the Cleveland Indians has been the dismal showing of the club that forced them into a pennant playoff in 1948—the Boston Red Sox. The Indians, at least, still retain a shred of a chance to take it all. There is now doubt that the Red Sox will get into the first division.

This was supposed to be Boston's year, after that tremendous rush the Red Sox staged last season to move from 14 games behind the lead into a tie for first place. Now Joe McCarthy's pitching is being exposed as worse than it was supposed to be.

POVICH

Dominic DiMaggio is having the best year of his life for the Red Sox. Ted Williams is having a thoroughly respectable season. Yet the Sox can't win. McCarthy's genius can't overcome his kind of pitching.

Those who never quite agreed that McCarthy was a managerial genius pointed out that he always had powerful clubs with the Yankees. He had pitching as well, though it was overshadowed by Yankee hitting.

THE PRIME EXAMPLE of how far good pitching can take a club is being offered by Connie Mack's Athletics. It's pretty obvious now that he has the league's best staff going for him. His pitching and Eddie Joost have put Mack's team in second place and in full contention with the Yanks.

Mack has come up with the prize rookie in Alex Kellner who has won 12, and has a six-game streak now going for him. In a year when Phil Marchildon has been bothered with arm trouble, Kellner has more than taken up the slack And any time Mack sends such as Coleman and Brissie to the mound he also has a high expectancy of winning. If Marchildon comes around they may overtake the Yankees.

And Joost is on his way to earning the most valuable player award. Those home runs he hits are so much gravy to the A's. He's giving the club the best shortstop protection in the league, and making the A's infield the most feared doubleplay combination extant. In fact, there are well founded reports that Mr. Mack ultimately expects to hand over his managerial job to Joost.

JIMMY DYKES and Al Simmons were supposed to be in direct line for the job of managing the A's when Mr. Mack decided to quit, but now he is completely smitten with Joost. "Another thing," my informant tells me, "Mr. Mack doesn't want to offend either Dykes or Simmons by giving the job to the other, so Joost is very apt to get it."

This is a year when Bob Feller can't be blamed for losing the pennant for the Indians. In company with Feller, Manager Boudreau himself and last year's rookie pitching wonder, Gene Bearden, are having poor seasons. There is evidence that the Indians couldn't win it, even with Feller at his best.

The Indians' collapse is not surprising to most baseball men. They couldn't see the Indians as repeaters unless all of the players who took 'em to last year's pennant had another good year. And that was too much to expect. Boudreau, Bearden, Gordon, Keltner, Lemon, Gromek and Doby are far behind last year's performances.

THE YANKEES are, of course, the team to catch, and much harder to catch now that Joe DiMaggio has brought his big bat to their aid. It is popularly presumed that if the Yankees could lead the league without DiMaggio as they did, then they are a shoo-in with him.

Manager Casey Stengel, though, wishes he could believe it. Stengel privately confesses his worriment over his pitchers, wonders how long they can keep staggering to victories as they have been doing with the help of Joe Page. He has already dismissed Cleveland and the Red Sox as pennant factors, but he's plainly afraid that the A's will cause trouble.

"And to think," says Stengel. "When I had that Joost with the Braves, he couldn't buy a hit. He is the greatest form reversal in my 39 years in baseball."

Grand Slam Home Run by Chapman Wins Second

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 4.—It took 13 of the Athletics to clip the Nats in the first game of today's double-header, but Sam Chapman did it by himself in the second game.

Following his team's 9-7 success, Chapman whaled a bases-loaded homer, another with nobody on board and a single to account for six runs in the nightcap.

His teammates managed for another couple and it all added up to an 8-0 triumph.

The Nats had to struggle to be blanked by rookie Bobbie Shantz, but they made it. They got 10 hits, one less than Connie Mack's second placers, but they simply refused to hit when it meant something and left 12 runners stranded.

Didn't Lose Easily

And Washington didn't lose the first game easily, either. The boys had a 6-2 lead going into the seventh inning, but they came out of it in sad shape as the A's racked up six runs to snap the Nats winning streak, an impressive thing which consisted of one straight.

Sherry Robertson and Eddie Robinson contributed homers in the losing effort in the opener, but Ray Scarborough, Mickey Haefner and Dick Welteroth didn't contribute too much pitching.

Dick Fowler, stepping in in a relief role, grabbed the victory and aided his cause by driving in two runs during the seventh inning flare up.

Dick Weik, who beat the A's in relief last week, met up with 'em again in the second game and quickly proved to the 18,024 Independence Day celebrants that his success was strictly accidental.

Didn't Get a Foul

The first three A's he faced didn't even hit a foul off him. It was practically imposible because he threw only one strike while walking all three.

He threw two strikes to Chapman. Sam fouled the first one, but Robinson dropped it. There were two errors on the next play—one by Weik for his pitch and the other by a customer deep in the upper tier of the left field bleachers who dropped Chapman's 9th homer.

Chapman made it 5-0 with home run No. 10 in the third inning off the same Mr. Weik, who was removed as a safety measure (his own) in the fourth for a pinch-hitter. The A's got their last three runs at the expense of Welteroth, who served up a home run ball to Hank Majeski in the opener. He held Chapman to a trifling single.

In Good Shape

The Nats were in good shape entering the seventh inning of the opener. They lit into Carl Scheib for three runs in the first inning and after the A's had gotten two of those back in their half of the inning, the Nats retaliated with three more runs in the fourth to give Ray Scarborough a 6-2 lead.

Robertson, who drove in three runs, whacked two across in the first inning, clearing the right field wall to score Gil Coan, who had walked, as well as himself.

Two singles (Kozar's and Dente's) and an outfield fly later it was 3-0 as Evans hoisted to right to bring in Clyde Vollmer.

Scheib Knocked Out

Carl Scheib, bidding for his third victory, was driven to cover in the fourth, replaced by Fowler, who got credit for his eighth success. Dente's single started the three-run rumpus.

Evans doubled Dente home and scored a moment later as Scarborough singled. Fain's error on Coan's grounder and Robertson's fly to center brought in Scarborough with the third run.

Scarborough had a five-hitter going into the sixth, but neither he nor his four-run lead was around after 11 of the A's had batted.

Fain Starts It

It began innocently enough as Fain singled, but Chapman walloped his second double and Hank Majeski and Elmer Valo also doubled. That was deemed enough for Scarborough and in came Mickey Haefner who promptly filled the bases by walking Fox

Left Newhouser Off Stars On Record, Lou Says

Detroit, July 4 (AP).—Manager Lou Boudreau explained today why he left Pitcher Hal Newhouser of the Detroit Tigers off the American League All-Star team.

Boudreau told a reporter that when he picked the pitchers, Newhouser's record of seven wins against five losses compared unfavorably with that of Allie Reynolds of the New York Yankees.

At that time—two weeks ago—Reynolds had a 7-1 record.

"Newhouser is a great pitcher," said Boudreau, "and I hate to leave him off the team, but when I had to pick the pitchers, Reynolds had the better record."

Manager Red Rolfe of the Tigers commented: "I think Boudreau was very fair and liberal in picking his staff."

Dodgers Beat Phils Twice By 7-1, 8-4

Brooklyn, July 4 (AP).—Brooklyn protected its National League lead today by sweeping a doubleheader from the Philadelphia Phillies, taking the afternoon game, 8-4, after winning a 7-1 morning decision behind Preacher Roe.

Don Newcombe, the Brooks' Negro pitching ace, picked up his sixth win in the second game but he needed relief help from Jack Banta in the eighth.

SAM AS A SPECTATOR—Sam Snead, winner of the Washington Star open yesterday, briefly plays the part of a spectator in the above picture. On the 15th hole, Sam stands under Caddie Al Anderson's umbrella watching Skip Alexander make a shot. A minute later, Sam hit an approach shot inches from the hole for a birdie that virtually won the tournament at the Prince Georges Country Club

Harry Bradshaw's 67 Paces Qualifiers in British Open

Sandwich, England, July 4 (AP).—Harry Bradshaw, former Irish Open titleholder, blistered the Royal St. Georges Course with a 67 today to lead the field through the first qualifying round of the British Open Golf championship.

Sharing second place were favorite Bobby Locke of South Africa, wisecracking Johnny Bulla, Phoenix, Ariz., professional playing out of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Ken Bousfield, young British pro who picked up some pointers on the United States winter circuit. Each had 69.

Locke and Bulla, playing an hour and a half apart, shot their subpar rounds on the Royal Cinque Ports Course, near the English Channel, at Deal. Like Bradshaw, Bousfield played Royal St. Georges here, where the 72-hole tournament proper will open Wednesday.

One stroke behind, at 71, came Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, amateur.

Dynamite Laurel Victor

After finishing third in two attempts, Dynamite, an 11-year-old gelding by Volomite, owned by W. A. Horner of Richmond, Va., and driven by Jack Horner, hit the finish line the victor by two lengths in the sixth and feature one-mile trot at Laurel Raceway last night.

Dynamite was clocked in 2:08 2-5 and returned $9.80, $7.00 and $3.80 across the board, while Biery Hanover paid $9.60 and $5.00, with Pearl Gantle returning $2.80.

A crowd of some 6000 saw the races.

Silver Quite Sure, jr., and Chief Alcar, a pair of longshots, grabbed first places in the first two events and paid 16 daily double tickets holders $487.40 each.

Silver Quite Sure, jr., a four-year-old, trained and driven by Joe Spencer returned $35.40 in the first race voer the mile route. Alcar, an 11-year-old won the second, also a mile race, with the help of a photo, and paid $24.40.

Hamilton Wins Virginia Title

Hot Springs, Va., July 4 (AP).—Slender Jack Hamilton proved a dozen times here today he's an expert at getting out of trouble and used his remarkable recovery shots and some deadly putting to defeat Wynsol Spencer, 3 and 2, for the 1949 amateur golf championship of Virginia.

Hogan's 2-Run Single Gives Marx 6-4 Win

A two-run single by Johnny Hogan in the seventh inning gave Marx Jewelers junior team a 6-4 victory over the Washington Capitols yesterday at Taft Field.

Flying Yanks Sink Bosox, 3-2 and 6-4

New York, July 4 (AP).—The league-leading New York Yankees swept a double-header from the reeling Boston Red Sox today, 3-2 and 6-4. The second contest was called after seven and a half called after 7½ innings because of darkness.

It was the first double victory for the Yanks this season and the seventh and eighth straight losses for the Sox, who are now 12 full games off the pace.

The Yanks maintained their 4½-game edge over the second place Philadelphia A's who whipped Washington twice.

The Sox blew a chance to win the first game in the ninth inning when, with the bases full and one out, Al Zarilla lined an apparent run-scoring single to right field. But Johnny Pesky, figuring the ball would be caught, waited at third to tag up. Cliff Mapes picked up the ball on a bounce and fired to the plate, forcing Pesky.

After Joe DiMaggio crashed his fifth home run to knot the score at 4-4 in the fifth inning of the second game, Billy Johnson singled with the bases full in the seventh inning to clinch the verdict.

Before the large crowd of 63,876 was settled Dom DiMaggio sent the Sox off flying in the opener when he smacked his fourth home run to lead off the first inning.

Vern Stephens uncorked his nIntteenth home run in the fifth to deadlock the sore, 2-2.

Catcher Birdie Tebbetts allowed Mapes to score the winning run in the bottom of the fifth when he dropped Pitcher Walt Masterson's throw. Masterson, starting his third game for Boston, was tagged with his fourth loss.

Cinch Is Just That at Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., July 4.—Away from the winner's circle for two years, C. P. Chenoweth's Cinch, proved all the name implies and won the Independence Day purse before some 8000 holiday turf fans. Showing stretch punch missing in his two previous outings, Cinch came on boldly to win easily by two lengths in a field of eight.

The winner returned a $31.20 mutuel. He was clocked in 1:17 4-5 for the about 6 furlongs over a fast track and under cloudless skies.

Both favorite and longshot players had their innings. The fifth race, another allowance affair, went to a popular choice. Mrs. E. B. Lee's Maxim Miss, making her first start of the season here after campaigning on the mile tracks, won by three lengths under the handling of Jockey Stanely Austin.

The filly took the lead in the field of eight 3-year-olds, and refused to be dislodged. McKenney and Hickman's Valley Dream was second, ahead of Mrs. M. M. Dunaway's Frank Moose. The winner paid $4.20 and was clocked in a creditable :49 4-5 for the about 4½ furlongs.

The daily double paid $23.40 on the 2 and 8 combination. Jockey Buddy Root rode A. M. Hine's W. M. Green home at $9.40 in the first race and Ray Arduini scored with Richard Pending Roziante, a $5.40 favorite, in the second event.

Armed Takes Second by 1½ Lengths

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, July 4 (AP).—Calumet Farms' sensational Coaltown and game old Armed ran one-two in the $54,800 Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington Park today with Coaltown establishing a track record of 1:48 2-5 for the 1⅛ miles holiday fixture.

Coaltown, in winning his ninth victory in 10 starts this season, blotted out the old record of 1:49 1-5 established by Armed in capturing the same race in 1947 and equaled by Citation in winning the event a year ago.

Coaltown earned $36,700 for Warren Wright, owner of Calumet Farms, bringing his winnings for the year to $179,825 and $282,475 from two years of racing.

Dixiana Takes Third

Coaltown led the 8-year-old Armed to the wire by a length and a quarter. In third place, half a length back of Armed, was Dixiana Stables' Star Reward, which upset Coaltown by three lengths in the recent Equipoise Mile. Woolford Farm's Delegate, King Ranch's Better Self, and Oscar J. Breault's Brolite completed the six-horse field and finihed in the order named. Calumet's Free America and Dixiana's Shy Guy were late scratches.

A sweltering crowd of 30,694 established the Calumet pair favorites at odds of 2 to 5. They returned $2.80 to win and the same amount to place. There was no show betting.

ing a six, one over par, on the tenth, an easy par 5, which Snead and Alexander both birdied in four. Harbert's tee shot went into a fairway trap and he tried to come out with a wood. Then he hooked his third shot.

Middlecoff ran into a bad string of 5-5-5 through the twelfth hole. He missed a 6-foot putt for a birdie on the tenth, went over par on the eleventh when his tee shot found trouble and he three-putted the twelfth for a third straight 5.

Harrison just about eliminated himself with 5-4-5-5 through the thirteenth.

Snead and Alexander, meanwhile, were hard at it. Alexander lost a stroke to par on the eleventh, where he took a 5, but Snead threw one away on the par 3 fourteenth by hitting his tee shot over the green.

So it looked like Snead and Harrison for it over the last four holes. They were all even as they stood on the fifteenth tee. By the time they went to the seventeenth tee, Snead practically had $2600 first money in his pocket.

Sam knocked his second shot nearly into the hole on the 432-yard fifteenth for an easy birdie 3. Alexander flubbed his tee shot, wound up with a 5, and was two shots behind Snead with three holes to go.

By that time Middlecoff was in the clubhouse with his total of 274 posted.

Got Big Birdie

Snead heard that par in would give him the title by one stroke.

Never one to be satisfied with so narrow a margin, Snead reached the 516-yard sixteenth in two, got a 4 for his second straight birdie, and knew he was just about in.

He got pars easily on the seventeenth and 18th, and wasn't even ruffled when Harbert almost holed an eagle 2 on the last hole, his approach shot hitting the flag and stopping inches away.

Snead's victory increased his winnings for 1949 to $16,460.82, giving him first place in this category. Middlecoff's second-place finish was worth $1900 and he stands second in earnings with $16,149.57.

Col. J. W. Wilson of the Army-Navy Country Club won the amateur championship by finishing with 73, one over par, for a total of 290, beating out Ralph Bogart, Chevy Chase, by two shots.

Pirates Win, 2-1 and 1-0, Take Sixth

Cincinnati, July 4 (AP).—Cliff Chambers and Bill Werle came up with two brilliant pitching performances today as the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Cincinnati, 2 to 1, and 1 to 0, to move into sixth place in the National League. Chambers allowed only two hits in winning the opener and Werle, a rookie, gave upseven singles in winning the nightcap.

Ewell Blackwell started his first game of the season for the Reds in the second game but left for a pinch hitter in the last of the sixth with a scoreless tie.

Hale, Moses Challenge Leaders

Two From District Score High in Hampton Boat Races

By Happy Walker

Hampton, Va., July 4.—Three favorite sons pulled out all the stops at the Hampton Yacht Club annual aquatic festival here today in an attempt to defeat Vic Scott, Forest Hill, Long Island, claimant to racing fame.

The trio, Ike Hale, Washington; J. B. Broaddus, Fredericksburg, Va., and Hudson Moses, Washington, forced the pace in every heat crowding Scott all the way until the last heat of the F Hydro class when the flying Scott was forced out by underwater debris and could not finish.

As a result, J. B. Broaddus, in his revamped Squeaky not only divided top honors with Scott with 1325 points each, but was the only contestant to win first place in both heats of any event. Close behind Broaddus came Ike Hale in his Senator, slightly the worse for yesterday's mishap at Richmond, taking 1092 points. Washington Hotel executive Hudson Moses, handily placed third for the day's high points with a total of 784.

In the stock utility event, Jim Thompson, Yorktown, Va., tallied 800 points, while Jim Teague, Hampton, and Wes Lusby, Washington, D. C., in his Miss Bell, tied for second place with 525 points each. Lusby was awarded second place in the event on the fastest elapsed time for both heats.

By far the most closely contested event of the day was the F. Hydro class which saw J. B. Broaddus pacing the field for a total of 800 points followed seconds later by Ike Hale with 525 points and Hudson Moses 392 points.

Mrs. George Martin won the ladies driving contest with a 180-yard average. Don Sullivan was the pitch and putt winner among the men and Mrs. Ethel Metzger led the fair sex.

The 36-hole sweepstakes was won by A. M. Pickette, 157—26—131. Tom O'Byron was in the second slot with a card of 156—24—132.

CONGRESSIONAL — H. L. Anderson and S. J. Meuland both chalked up 34,36—70s to tie for medalist honors in the qualifying round for the two-men championship.

In the mixed scotch foursome, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Cornell took low net prize with a 91, 21—70 and Elmer Jenkins and Mrs. D. H. Henderson were first in low gross with 44, 42—86s.

E. V. Steinem shot a 77—10—67 to win top honors in the class "A" of the sweepstakes.

Jack Rubin won the hole-in-one contest with his drive landing 47 inches from the pin. Sam Schwartz drove his tee shot 285 yards to cop the driving contest.

WASHINGTON — Carrol Hair and H. G. Simmonds had a best ball of 58 to take first place in the pro-amateur tournament. Carrol Courtney and Paul West tied with Donald Lee and E. M. Norton for second place at 60.

KENWOOD—Don Dudley and Joe Wilson won the two-man tea mchampionship by defeating Burt Ferguson and Larry Imhoff, 1 up, after a 23-hole battle. In the second flight, Julian Murphy and Don Thomson defeated Robert Fuchs and Marvin Wise, 3 and 2. J. T. Martenson and Don Uhus downed Jerry Strong and Harold Warner, 1 up, to win the third flight.

Several clubs canceled tournaments which had been scheduled for yesterday out of respect for the memory of Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase Country Club professional, who was buried yesterday.

Trailing by 8-6 now, the Nats did nothing about it in the seventh but Robinson smacked his eleventh homer in the eighth to trim the deficit only to have Majeski hit a homer for the A's in the same inning to make it 9-7 and that's where matters ended.

Wadden Wins Tennis Test

By Jules Loh

Tommy Wadden, former District junior champ, won match point with a perfect service ace to climax a grueling 6—4, 6—4, third round win over Bill Dassett in the District of Columbia men's singles championships yesterday at Columbia Country Club. Wadden will square off in the quarterfinals today with Bill Gifford.

All the seeded players came through their Fourth of July matches without casualty, with the exception of fifth ranked Gil Bogley, who defaulted to Bill Dassett due to his late arrival from the Tri-State meet in Cincinnati.

Jack Yates surprised a holiday crowd as well as third seeded Don Leavens with his deft drop shots and seemingly impossible retrieves. Yates was even so bold as to ace his older opponent before Leavens went on to win, 6—1, 6—4.

In the doubles events, which started yesterday, second-seeded Barney Welsh and Hugh Lynch toyed with Ray Lewis and Mark Haller for one game and then turned on the heat and won, 6—1, 6—0. One of the 12 straight games the Lynch-Welsh team won was on four consecutive Welsh serves which Haller found unreturnable.

In the fourth round singles matches today at 5:30, Jim Thackara will meet Ed Dunham, Tommy Wadden will meet Bill Gifford and Mickey Pardew faces Davey Johnson.

Snead, Lane Show Their Bald Spots

By West McLean
Post Reporter

SAM SNEAD commented at the close of the Washington Star Open yesterday that he had enjoyed playing the Prince Georges course very much and . . . "It's always nice to pick up the first place check" . . . a $2600 slip of paper.

When photographers asked Snead and Runner-up Cary Middlecoff to pose with Gov. Wm. Preston Lane, jr., who was presenting the prizes, Cary quipped, "Well, Sambo, I see you stayed around for this one. Don't often see you accept anything but first place checks."

Governor Lane remarked during the ceremony, "If I could drive like that guy, I wouldn't have to be governor."

Lane won the plaudits of the crowd when he doffed his hat, displaying his own semi-bald pate and then quickly grabbed Snead's hat from his balding head. Snead quickly reovered, however, and pulled the Governor's hat from his hand and put that on.

After Snead had his check and got his hat back, he quickly got away with, "Let me out of here, I'm burning up."

So was the golf course after what Sambo did to it for 4 days

Attack Over Award To Pound Answered

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

To have interfered with the award of a $1000 prize to poet Ezra Pound would have been a "bureaucratic error," Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans said this weekend.

Evans said that he personally regarded the prize-winning book, Pound's "The Pisan Cantos," as "an unfortunate choice."

Evans's statement appeared in the Saturday Review of Literature in response to an attack carried by the weekly book and phonograph record review which criticized, on political and artistic grounds, the award to Pound by the non-paid Fellows of the Library of Congress in the library's name.

The award, the Bollingen Prize in Poetry, was for the best book of poetry published in 1948.

Now in St. Elizabeths

Pound, American-born poet, is under indictment on treason charges because of broadcasts he made from Italy during World War II. He is in St. Elizabeths Hospital, where he was committed in 1946, before facing trial, because he was found of "unsound mind," and "suffering from a paranoid state."

The Fellows at the time the prize-winning book was selected included: Conrad Aiken, W. H. Auden, Louise Bogan, Katherine Garrison Chapin, T. S. Eliot, Paul Green, Robert Lowell, Katherine Anne Porter, Karl Shapiro, Allen Tate, Willard Thorp, Robert Penn Warren, and the late Theodore Spencer—all well known writers.

Though how they voted has never been disclosed; there were dissenters. There is also reason to believe that some who voted for Pound's book took into consideration his previous work and championship of William Butler Yeats, Rabindranath Tagore and other once unknown talents—though these considerations are outside the intent of the award.

The Saturday Review of Literature's attack began in the June 11 issue, nearly four months after the award was announced and at a time when the literary world and book business are generally quiet.

The attack, which has since continued, began with an article, "Treason's Strange Fruit," by Robert Hillyer, president of the Poetry Society of America and artistically more allied to the "conservative" than to the "modern" school. An accompanying editorial by Norman Cousins, editor, and Harrison Smith, president of the magazine, said: "What we urge is that if Pound is not to be shot as a traitor, at least let him not be festooned with quasi-official prizes and laurels."

Evans said the Fellows in American Letters were first appointed in 1944 by his predecessor, Archibald MacLeish, and were chosen from among "distinguished workers in the field" who could devote the neessary time to such tasks as advising the library on the strengthening of its collections, promotion of bibliographical and publication projects and on the choice of an annual incumbent of the Chair of Poetry in English.

"Persons of Attainment"

After saying that they were in his belief "persons of attainment and a high sense of responsibility," Evans said:

"I personally regard the choice of 'The Pisan Cantos' for the Bollingen Prize as an unfortunate choice.

"I think it is sufficient to say that from my poetically ignorant point of view Mr. Pound's book is hardly poetry at all."

But, he said, "I believe now, as I believed at the time of announcing the award, that I would be engaging in an improper interference with free scholarship if I were to substitute my own decision in this matter for the decision of the Fellows.

"I think that for me to interfere with the work of scholars would be far worse than to award the prize for a book which did not deserve it.

"After all, a cure is available in scholarly terms for scholarly errors, but I know of no cure for the bureaucratic error of overriding scholarly judgment in cases of this kind."

Possibility of a change in the composition of the Fellows was indicated by Evans, noting the charge "made against them of being politically motivated members of a clique or a school or a particular esthetic group."

Evans said, "Now that the charge has been made I shall, of course, inquire into the situation with a view to the possibility if it should prove desirable of strengthening the representative character of the group."

Pound's book was criticized as anti-Semitic and fascistic.

Defends Choice of Eliot

Evans said he was "deeply disturbed" by the point of view that "poetic quality must somehow pass a poliitcal test. In my many years of study and teaching in the field of political science, I came to regard a political test for art and poetry as a sign of dictatorial, illiberal, undemocratic approach to matters of the mind."

Replying to criticism of T. S. Eliot's being a Fellow, Evans said American citizenship is not a requirement for being a Fellow, and he had "no intention" of asking Eliot, now a British subject, to resign.

Evans also said the Bollingen Foundation, which provided $10,000 for 10 annual awards, had no part in the choice of "The Pisan Cantos."

Replying editorially to Evans' statement, the weekly said "that once the name of the Library of Congress was attached to the award it could not avoid responsibility."

3 Southwest Areas Urged For Cleanup

Three Southwest section "blighted areas" have been recommended to District Health Officer George C. Ruhland as a starting point for his block-by-block drive to improve sanitation standards.

Dr. John R. Pate, director, Southwest Health Center, suggested the campaign be organized on the 200 block of F st., 300 block of G st. or the 400 block of Delaware ave.

Dr. Pate said a similar drive in Dixon's Court sw. last fall has resulted in improvement of outdoor toilets, screens, garbage collection and removal of rodent-infested high board fences.

The plan calls for a house by house campaign using staff members of the Bureau of Public Health Engineering in conjunction with his aides. In addition, public health nurses would teach residents principles of health and how to protect themselves against diseases.

Dr. Ruhland said one of the three spots will be selected for the intensive drive in addition to one in the central area of the Northwest section. "It will be a self-help idea, an attempt at rehabilitation," he explained.

The health officer complained that at present Col. William C. Cary, jr., director of the Bureau of Public Health Engineering, is required to spend several days a week on other governmental projects, limiting the time available for such matters as the proposed drive.

Dr. Ruhland said Cary's membership on the District Personnel Board and the Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings limits his usefulness in his Health Department assignment. He said he intended to discuss with the Commissioners the possibility of releasing Colonel Cary from the board duties.

The health officer already has asked representatives of Negro religious and civic groups to assist in the cleanup program.

Police Claim Clothes Theft Admission

Clothes not only make the man—but sometimes make the man suspect, Paul A. Pendergraph, 18, of 1033 21st st. nw., discovered yesterday.

The youth was held for investigation after police said, he admitted removing $1000 worth of clothing from the Union Clothing Shop, 3425 M st. nw., the weekend of June 25-26.

Pendergraph, according to police, apparently took the slogan "Rready to wear" to heart. For he also outfitted himself from skin outward in the store's most expensive apparel, it was charged, leaving behind his worn garb.

From this second-hand clothing, police derived first-hand information.

A laundry mark was traced to a Samuel Johnson, 26, of 1306 9th st. nw.

Confronted by police holding the worn clothing, Johnson said he lent the clothing to Pendergraph.

Police picked up Pendergraph on the street at 5:30 a. m. yesterday. They said he is a parolee from the National Training School with a housebreaking record.

They said the youth had entered the store by climbing the roof and sawing through skylight bars with a hacksaw.

Six suitcases loaded with only the finest suits and haberdashery were hauled by rope to the roof and then lowered to the ground, police said. According to Detective Benson Taylor of No. 7 Precinct station only two sweaters and a sport shirt have been recovered.

Strike Blocks Tin, Hawaiian Canners Facing Shutdown

Honolulu, July 4 (AP).—In this 65th day of the Hawaiian stevedore strike, fast-shrinking supplies of tinplate threatened to affect soon the pineapple and fish canning industries.

The American Can Co., and the Tuna Boat Owners Association issued warnings that 7000 pineapple and 1000 tuna workers would be idle by the end of July unless strikebound tinplate in port could be delivered.

T. A. Klabau of the American Can Co., notified pineapple plantations deliveries of tinplate could not continue after the first week of August. The peak harvest season of the 70-million-dollar-pineapple crop begins then.

There was no development over the holiday in the strike of the 2000 stevedores of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. They quit May 1, demanding a wage raise from $1.40 to $1.72 an hour.

Sparkler Sets Blast, Boy Painfully Hurt

Oakland, Calif., July 4 (AP).—Twelve-year-old Jackie Backstrom produced one of the loudest bangs in Fourth of July history—with a sparkler.

The sparkler ignited sewer gas in front of his home. The blast sailed a manhole cover into the air. Jackie's face and arms were painfully scorched.

BIG MONEY WAITING TO BE WON
We are seeking contributions from you, your neighbor, from everyone interested in helping American war orphans gain the education they deserve. But in asking your aid, we also offer you the opportunity to win a fortune.
It is within your power to help restore to American war orphans many of the opportunities and advantages they would have enjoyed had their fathers remained alive. These children are denied many things—even, sometimes, the care and attention of their mother who must work to support them. Trade schools, colleges and universities are allocating scholarships to educate war orphans, but tuition scholarships alone are not enough. We must care for students who become ill or are injured. Many of them need funds for transportation, books and supplies, living expenses. And, of course, there are not nearly enough free scholarships for all the war orphans who need them. In order to raise funds to help the orphans of America's war dead to take advantage of the educational opportunities that have been offered us, we enlist your support by means of this dramatic and fascinating contest in which YOU may win a fortune.
240 CASH PRIZES!
Your contribution is needed now, so that we can help support these orphaned boys and girls at school—and you will be happy to know that every penny of the net proceeds of this campaign (after paying for the prizes, advertising, and other necessary expenses) will be used by War Orphans Scholarships, Inc. to continue its good work. Yes! In return for your good deed and help, you may ... by using your puzzle-solving skill ... win one, two, or even three prizes in this contest—as much as $35,000.00 in cash! Yes, you personally may win $35,000.00 or $31,000.00 or $25,500.00 or $24,000.00—become rich indeed by using your puzzle-solving skill.
Your contribution to the War Orphans Scholarships, Inc. will be not only a real "act of charity", but also a repayment of a debt all of us owe to the widows and orphans of our valiant war dead. Certainly the children of these men deserve the finest education in the world—the kind of education their dads would have striven to provide had they remained alive to care for them.
A NEW CONVERTIBLE AS EXTRA PRIZE FOR ACTION!
So, please help by entering the contest today. You may win a fortune and by entering promptly you may also win ... as an EXTRA PRIZE for ACTION ... a brand new 1949 Buick Convertible. Yes ... some skill and time spent now in solving the puzzle on this page may put your foot firmly on the road to fortune.
The puzzle is fun to go. Read the instructions at right and enter the contest today!
FOLLOW THESE INSTRUCTIONS...
You will notice a list of animals' names under the puzzle. How many of these animals' names can you find in the puzzle?
HERE IS HOW IT IS DONE:
1. Find in the puzzle the first letter of any one of the listed names. Now try to find the second letter of that name in any adjoining square, either left or right or up or down but not diagonally. If you can, then proceed to find the third letter (remember it must adjoin the second letter either to the left or right or above or below). In that way, trace out the entire name. If you cannot, then although you have started with the right letter you may have started with the wrong square or maybe that particular name cannot be spelled out at all—for not all the names in the list are in the puzzle. (To illustrate how you find a name in the puzzle, we have traced out the name CAMEL for you. You will find it clearly marked out in the top part of the puzzle. We have also checked it in the list of animals' names below the puzzle. Be sure to take credit for it in adding up the number of names you have located.)
2. Once you have traced out a name you can then go to any other square in the puzzle and start tracing out another name from the list below the puzzle. However, you cannot use any letter square more than once. After you have located the name and traced it out in the diagram, place a check mark in the box to the left of that name in the list below the puzzle. Be sure also to fill in the number of names checked in the space provided below the puzzle. Be accurate for errors may cause you to lose out.
3. Now notice that there are five blank squares in the puzzle, and also four animals illustrated (see the four corners). You can obviously spell out more names if you fill in those five blank squares. Therefore fill in those blank squares with the five letters in the name of any one of the four animals illustrated. Those five letters can be placed into the five squares in any order you please. By experimenting you will find that certain letters are more helpful in certain squares than others. It is up to you to decide, after identifying the pictured animals, which of the four names is best to use.
4. You won't be able to use all of the letters in the diagram, nor will you be able to trace out all the names in the list. But how many names can you find? You earn 1 point for each listed name you trace out and check—plus 5 points for each animal's picture you identify. So be sure to fill in the five blank squares, and be sure to fill in clearly (in the spaces provided under the puzzle) the names of the four animals illustrated. The names of the animals illustrated in the puzzle need NOT appear in the list under the puzzle. If you identify the four pictured animals correctly and if you assume that the letter A is equal to 1, B to 2, C to 3, and so on, in the order of the alphabet to Z being 26, the combined value of the 20 letters that spell out the correct four names must be 223.

$55,000.00 IN THE BANK
The sum of $55,000.00 has been deposited in a special contest prize fund account with the National Bank of Washington (D. C.). This money will be used only for cash payment of prizes in this Puzzle Contest.
THE OFFICIAL RULES OF THE CONTEST
1. $55,000 will be awarded in accordance with the instructions, official prize list and these rules to the contestants who achieve the highest scores in solving the Official Contest Puzzle. This sum will be awarded in three prize groups: Group No. 1 with a first prize of $4,000.00; Group No. 2 with a first prize of $11,000.00; Group No. 3 with a first prize of $20,000.00. Each group has an additional list of 79 prizes each, making a total of 240 prizes in all. (See official list of prizes.)
2. To enter Group 1 a contestant must send in with his answer to the puzzle a donation of $2.00 to War Orphans Scholarships, Inc.; to enter Group 2 a donation of $5.00 is required and to enter Group 3 a donation of $10.00 must be sent in. A contestant may compete in any one, two or all three prize groups and ones having entered may transfer his entry from any group or groups to any other group or groups by submitting the necessary additional donation any time within the limits set forth in Rule 7.
3. Each prize group will be judged separately. The contestant who submits the highest valid score in Group 1 will be entitled to first prize in Group 1. Second prize in Group 1 will be awarded to the contestant with the second highest score submitted in that list and so on until the 80 prizes in Group 1 have been awarded. Prizes in Groups 2 and 3 will be awarded similarly.
4. In the event of ties in any group (which seem likely, since this is a large national contest), as many prizes will be reserved in that group as there are tied contestants, before any prizes are awarded for lower scores. To break such ties these tied contestants will be required to send in solutions to a set of five tie-breaking puzzles. The solutions to puzzle No. 1 in this tie-breaking set will be judged first and then the tied-for prizes will be awarded in the order of the valid scores submitted. If this is not sufficient to break all ties and permit awarding of all the tied-for prizes, then the solutions to puzzle No. 2 submitted by the remaining tied contestants will be judged. If ties still remain, the solutions of the still tied contestants to puzzle No. 3 will then be judged and so on, if necessary, to puzzle No. 5. This may mean that puzzles Nos. 2 to 5 may not have to be judged. However, if further needed to break ties a second, third or even a fourth set (each of 5 such tie-breaking puzzles to be judged similarly) may be used (a possible total of twenty puzzles). All tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to the original puzzle, though the letter mass may be larger and the picture identification required embracing objects as well as animals may be more difficult and numerous. As in the original puzzle, word lists will be supplied with each puzzle. Tie-breaker puzzles will be judged on the same basis as the original puzzle. A limited time (never less than three days and possibly as much as two weeks), the same for each contestant, will be given for solving tie-breaking puzzles and they will be judged on the same basis as the original puzzle. Tied contestants will not be required to make any further contributions. Should final ties remain after the fourth series of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which he or she is tied.
5. The contest is open to any resident of the Continental United States except employees of War Orphans Scholarships, Inc., and its subsidiary units, its advertising agencies, its service organizations, or members of their families. Also excluded is anyone who has won $500.00 or more in cash or kind awarded in any other puzzle contest prior to entering this contest, or any member of his or her family. Every possible precaution will be taken to enforce this provision. Only one member of an immediate family living at the same address may compete. All entries must bear a permanent home address in the Continental United States to which all contest mail will be sent. Where a contestant changes such permanent home address, War Orphans Scholarships, Inc., should be notified immediately, but War Orphans Scholarships, Inc., can, in no case, assume responsibility for delivery of mail. In view of the uncertain address of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, and the consequent delay in mail delivery, this contest of necessity is not open to them.
6. Each contestant will receive an acknowledgment and an entry number upon receipt of his or her solution to the Official Puzzle, which solution must be submitted on an Official Entry Form and must be accompanied by a contribution of $2.00 or more. In working out and submitting puzzle solutions, contestants must follow the instructions accompanying the puzzle. A contestant will not receive a higher score than that claimed nor than that earned. Neatness does not count, but unsigned or illegible entries, or entries so unclear as to be confusing, will not be considered, and donations accompanying disqualified entries will be returned after judging is completed. Where more than one entry is submitted by an individual, his or her highest valid score will be considered only in that group or groups in which that score is entered. That score will serve to compete in any one, two or all three prize groups, depending on the amount donated with that particular entry. An individual may win only one prize in each prize group.
7. All entries must be sent by mail to: AMERICAN WAR ORPHANS CONTEST WASHINGTON 13, D. C.
and must be postmarked before midnight, September 30, 1949, and received before 5 P. M., October 15, 1949, to be eligible for consideration. However, an extra sixty days from these dates is allowed for the mailing and receipt of additional donations to transfer from one group or groups to another group or groups. War Orphans Scholarships, Inc., will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical or mechanical errors and each contestant by the act of sending in an entry agrees to be bound by the rules and instructions and, in any event, by the decision of the War Orphans Scholarships, Inc., and/or its Committee on Awards on any and all matters affecting the contest. In the case of the names of objects, the final authority is the Merriam-Webster New International Dictionary, Unabridged, Second Edition, 1949 printing.
8. Any contestant who accepts help of any kind from anyone (same family or household excepted) will be disqualified. Sworn statements to this effect will be required from all winners and every reasonable effort will be made to enforce this rule.

Engraving Bureau Places All Hands on Straight 5-Day Week

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing has placed all of its 6000 employes here on a straight 5-day, 40-hour workweek. For the past several months about half of its employes have been on either a 48 or 55-hour week. The cutback in hours will mean a big drop in their paychecks since they were paid time and a half for all hours worked over 40.

The bureau turns out approximately 1,500,000,000 pieces of paper money a year, or a stack 850 times as high as the Washington Monument. Treasury's supply of paper money was at a record low point before the overtime work was ordered.

Meantime, the bureau has received the names of eligibles of persons who passed the recent printer's assistant exam. Civil Service can be expected to issue a firing order soon for those war service and temporary employes at the bureau who failed to pass the test. This is standard Civil Service procedure. It has been done in any number of other jobs.

STORY: It was inspired by all the office moves now taking place at the Pentagon. In the midst of one of the upheavals of moving, a unit, moved three times in the past year, found itself in quarters where one whole wall was covered with an immense map of the world.

Everyone who came into the office was impressed by the map and immediately went over to locate some familiar place. "Where," asked a visitor, "is Formosa?"

"It ought to be here," a long-suffering employe replied, "but if it's under control of the Army Department I'm sure it has been moved."

NLRB: The National Labor Relations Board recently had a case involving the Tyrone Power plant —not the movie star but a power plant in Tyrone, Ky.

G-GIRLS: Another one of the dormitories for G-girls at Arlington Farms is slated to be closed soon. The reason—lack of business.

On April 11 the dormitories were 95 per cent occupied. Then the roof fell in with these developments: (1) an order closing the dormitories and (2) a second order postponing the closing but raising the rents an average of $9.50.

Since then the occupancy rate has dropped to 80 per cent; more than 650 girls have moved out, and the number of G-girls living there has dropped from 3425 to 2754 in two months.

BILLS: Representative Multer (D., N. Y.) has in a bill to pay a 10 per cent differential to Federal workers who investigate, apprehend and guard criminals. Personnel people in the executive agencies have been working on a similar plan to pay a differential to any and all employes who are engaged in "hazardous" work . . . Representative Fogerty (D., R. I.) is pushing his bill which would make it illegal for an agency to require an employe to take annual leave to prevent its accumulation . . . The Senate has approved the Johnston bill to allow Capitol Hill employes until January of next year to come in under the Civil Service Retirement Act . . . The House has approved a bill to allow a professional employe of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics up to a year's leave to make studies which would benefit his agency. The employe would be paid during his leave, but he'd have to return to his NACA job.

AGRICULTURE: These employes were retired recently from this department: Juliet E. Alves, Joseph M. Baillie, Anna G. Bell, Stockton H. Boon, Geneveive E. Cronin, Richard J. Cummings, John W. Dunn, Marion W. Durham, Stacy E. Eckert, James Ralph Finn, Lester O. Fullon, William Melven Gray, James R. Houchins, Fred J. Hughes, Ernst V. Jotter, Phil Kennedy, Laura A. Knott, Colon R. Love, Loyal W. McKee, George C. Morbeck, Ellis E. Nichols, Arthur L. Perkins, Llewllyn J. Putsch, Harlon L. Reynolds, Ezra F. Sears, George E. Spinney, Clara G. Wallace, Frank E. Wooldridge, Henry F. Griffen, Mildred G. McCauley.

JOB: The VA Hospital here at 2650 Wisconsin ave. has openings for medical bacteriologist, $5232 to $6236 to start.

NEWSLETTER: We'll be glad to send a sample copy of our Federal Employe Newsletter to your Government employe friends outside of this city if you'll give us their names and addresses.

Board Meets Today on D. C. Recreation

The District Recreation Board is expected today to work out the terms under which it will take over the Interior Department's public play facilities.

Today's meeting, scheduled for 9 a. m. at board headquarters, 3149 16th st. nw., technically is a by-laws committee session. But the committee includes five of the six board members in the city.

The group is expected to agree to a new by-law pledging an eventual end to segregation. A statement of policy to that effect was approved at the board's June meeting but the by-laws were left unchanged. They now call for segregaton in board activities.

The new by-law, which would be formally voted at the regular July meeting, a week from today, is intended to satisfy Interior officials of the "good faith" of the board in working toward an end to segregation.

Once the action is taken, Interior's swimming, golf, tennis and other facilities will be turned over to the Recreation Board.

The board will operate them on its present basis—segregated, in most instances—at least for the rest of this summer. Two playgrounds now are being operated on a nonsegregated experimental basis with indications others, if not all, may be open to all races in another year.

The swimming pools, nub of last week's race clashes, would revert to their segregated basis for the rest of the summer at least. Two are for Negroes, six others for whites, including the two already controlled by the board.

Members of the by-laws committee are James M. Schwab, chairman, Wender, Fowler, Mrs. Alice C. Hunter, only Negro on the board, and Albert E. Steinem, Board of Education representative. Irving C. Root, Interior representative, is not on the committee but can be counted on to vote for the by-law change since it has the approval of Secretary of Interior Krug.

Krug, Wender, the Commissioners and several others worked out the proposed agreement at a conference last Friday in Krug's office.

2 Questioned, Released After Pool Incident

Two persons were held for questioning and later released by Park Police yesterday, following an incident at East Potomac Park pool. Twelve Negro boys swam there for five minutes.

Also questioned at Park Police headquarters was Albert DuGoff, 23, 5044 Hanna pl. se., a lifeguard at Anacostia pool.

No charges were placed against either person.

Raspberry said the two became involved in an argument inside the pool enclosure over the rights of the Negroes to swim at East Potomac.

Announcement was made over the loudspeaker that East Potomac would be closed if there was any trouble.

The Negro youths departed after a few minutes, and were refunded their admission fee.

Mrs. John C. Kunkel, 40, wife of a Republican Representative from Pennsylvania, yesterday reported to police the loss of a platinum bracelet set with diamonds and sapphires and insured for $22,000.

Mrs. Kunkel said the loss or theft occurred last Wednesday between 5 and 9:30 p. m. She said she believes she may have lost it while riding in a taxi from her home to the Carlton Hotel.

Mrs. Kunkel, the former Katherine Smoot of Baltimore, was married to the Representative in October, 1947. She was the widow of Dr. W. M. Kunkel, a distant relative of Representative Kunkel, who has represented the Eighteenth Pennsylvania District since 1938.

Trade Board Takes Poll on Home Rule

Members Are Voting On Kefauver Bill; House Committee To Receive Results

The Washington Board of Trade is polling its members for their views on the Senate-approved Kefauver home rule bill, it was announced yesterday.

William Press, board secretary, said results of the poll would be part of a lengthy brief which the board will present at public hearings before the House District Judiciary Subcommittee sometime after July 15.

The House group has scheduled a one-day hearing Thursday at 10 a. m., but has not yet set subsequent hearing dates for the over 40 other civic organizations and individual citizens who have asked time to testify on District home rule.

Opposition Recalled

The home rule poll-taking was authorized by the Board of Trade at its last directors' meeting.

An article in this week's Board of Trade News, announcing the poll, pointed out that a similar membership poll last year on the Auchincloss bill showed "strong opposition" to the suffrage proposal. About 30 per cent of the membership responded to that poll.

The announcement said the questionaire to be circulated now "will cover approximately the same ground and be as similar as possible to last year's poll in order to accurately gauge any shift in sentiment which may have occurred."

Last Year's Results

The 1948 poll showed the following results:

"Do you favor adoption of the Auchincloss bill?"—Yes, 26.9 per per cent. No, 59.2 per cent.

"Do you think those living in the District should approve by an officially conducted referendum vote any new form of government before it is put into effect?"—Yes, 79.1 per cent. No. 18 per cent. (The Kefauver bill calls for a referendum before home rule would go into effect.)

"Do you favor election of the Board of Education?"—Yes, 33.5 percent. No. 59.2 per cent.

"Do you think local suffrage without representation in Congress is desirable?"—Yes, 17.2 per cent. No. 79.3 per cent.

Press said yesterday that the poll on the Kefauver measure will be completed about July 15.

Slum Problem Of D. C. Before Senate Group

The Senate Appropriations Committee today is expected to tackle again the District's slum clearance problem.

The full committee, meeting at 10 a. m. to mark up the Independent Office supply bill, is slated to hear a personal appeal by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) for an immediate appropriation of 20 million dollars to put the 3-year-old District Redevelopment Land Agency into operation.

The Senate group also may consider the House-rejected $2,180,000 item to clear the Marshall Heights area in Southwest Washington.

Since enactment of the District Slum Clearance Act in 1946, carrying a 20-million-dollar authorization, the House has refused implementing funds on three separate ocassions.

An alternate method of financing a local attack on substandard housing—through District amendments to the national housing bill —also is scheduled for action this week.

Senate and House conferees may meet today or Wednesday to compromise differences between the separate housing bills approved by each house.

The local amendments, if agreed to in conference, will open the door to District participation in the public housing and slum clearance sections of the national program.

One amendment, carried in both the Senate and House versions, restores to National Capital Housing Authority the right to purchase sites for public housing units, financed by the Federal loan and grant provisions of the national housing program.

The other local provision, inserted in the House-approved bill, would permit the beleaguered District Land Agency to seek funds for slum-clearance projects directly from the Housing and Home Finance Agency, provided the project had not been denied funds previously by congressional appropriations committees.

Treated at Station

Others treated at the Silver Spring Fire Station included James Cooper, Chevy Chase; Maurice Blick, Chevy Chase; T. J. Clark, Naval Ordnance Laboratory; H. Pepper, Takoma Park; B. Reed, Naval Ordnance Laboratory; Robert Grosham, Bethesda; T. W. Duffy, Silver Spring; William McLean, Chevy Chase; Chief Ed J. Sackett, Chevy Chase; William Weaver, Chevy Chase, and Peter Stewart, Silver Spring.

Others were treated at the scene as physicians of the community were mobilized to assist rescue squads and ambulance crews from Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Another who was overcome while he stuck at his post of duty was Pvt. Harold Treadwell of the Montgomery County Police Dept.

Two truckloads of oxygen tanks were hurried to Silver Spring to treat those overcome by smoke to augment supplies already on hand in the Fire Station and on Fire and Rescue Squad trucks.

Waitresses from Silver Spring restaurants carried heavy pitchers and glasses to serve ice water to the laboring firemen.

Policemen, mobilized from all parts of the area, fought to keep the normally heavy traveled Georgia ave. open for emergency traffic and block off the enormous Fourth of July flood of motorists and curious spectators.

Thousands of persons, attracted by the smoke and flames, poured into the vicinity, women in shorts and bras, men barefoot and in shorts.

After the fire started, the flames spread so rapidly that by the time the second fire company arrived, the entire lumber yard was engulfed.

Flames shot skyward until they could be seen from Wisconsin ave., more than three miles to the West. And the pall of smoke rose and spread until it was observed in Hyattstown, more than 20 miles away. Some persons reported they saw it from downtown Washington.

Lumber Still Blazing

Though the fire was brought under control within about two hours of the time it was reported, shortly after 5 p. m., lumber piles were still blazing late last night. Emergency flood lighting facilities were rigged up and firemen planned an all-night job in the heat, smoke and cinders, to extinguish the last of the blaze.

Nearest of the menaced buildings outside the actual fire area was the home of Chris Kronenbitter and his family at 1104 Bonifant st. At the height of the fire, when prospects of stopping it within the Supply Co. area seemed dim, neighbors mobilized, broke into the Kronenbitter home(and caried out all the furniture. The family was away on a holiday motor trip.

After danger receded, the neighbors dutifully caried the furniture back into the house again.

A momentary failure of water pressure dismayed firemen and caused them to make hurried plans to fall back from the then-advancing flames, but the pressure picked up again and enabled them to continue the fight.

The office of the company, at 8226 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, was not affected by the blaze. But the block-square area, embracing the lumber yard, brick woodworking mill and at least two other smaller buildings, were destroyed.

Fireman and police hurriedly ordered residents out of homes and other buildings nearby, in the fear that they, too, would be consumed.

Hose lines were run to wet down these structures and they ultimately were saved, though paint on some was blistered and windows cracked from the intense heat.

Many of the volunteer fire companies in Montgomery County were at College Park participating in a Fourth of July parade, when they were summoned by radio. The parade "took off" from the route where spectators were viewing it, company after company speeding to answer the radio summons for help.

Later, fire companies from Prince Georges County were added to those fighting the blaze, and two calls to Washington brought eight engines, four trucks and a battalion chief from here.

The volunteer companies, resplendent in their best uniforms, and with equipment highly polished for the holiday display, were soon covered with sweat, smoke and dirt.

They worked especially hard to protect the nearby plant of the Morningside Dry Cleaning Co., where hundreds of gallons of highly explosive cleaning fluid were stored, and succeeded in diverting the blaze from it.

Four Leads Followed In Murder Of Sailor

Police, FBI Seek 2 Holdup Men, Also Persons Who Saw Little or Car

Clews in the robbery-slaying of an 18-year-old sailor near Rockville narrowed the search considerably yesterday, but Montgomery County Police and the FBI were still following several leads, any one of which, they said, may "pay out."

The victim was John J. Little, stationed at the Naval Air Station, Oceana, Va., hitch-hiking for the holiday weekend to his home at Loretto, Pa. His body was found Saturday morning 1½ miles north of Rockville, his head brutally bludgeoned and his wallet missing. The killing occurred between 1 and 2 a. m.

Blood-Stained Car Found

At 3:30 a. m., Saturday, a blood-stained car, previously stolen in Rockville, in which the murder apparently occured, was found over the Potomac River seawall between New Hampshire and Constitution aves. nw.

Last night, police and FBI agents were following these leads:

They were trying to find a Public Buildings Administration guard, as yet unidentified, who was reported to have seen two men dressed in white, possibly sailors, hurrying away from the area where the car was run over the seawall.

They appealed for two Negro men who reported to the park police that the car had gone over the seawall, to contact either the Montgomery County police or the FBI, to supply any possible further information in the case.

Wallet, 2 Brooms Sought

They sought Little's missing wallet, a brown leather one with a beaded interior surface, as well as two brooms which Hazle Oliver Hawkins, Horner's lane, Rockville, said were left in his car when it was parked at the place where it was stolen.

They sought two men who held up two hitch-hiking students early Sunday in the grounds of the Agriculture Department's Experimental Station at Beltsville, Md.

Montgomery County police yesterday questioned a sailor stationed at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center. He told them that he picked up another sailor early Saturday morning and drove him from Bethesda to Rockville, arriving at the latter community about 1:30 a. m. He said the description of the man he carried answered that of Little. However, he was unable to identify a full-face picture of Little, the only one police now have.

Court Holds Landlord in Shooting Case

William Roy McIlrath, 64, 460 H st. nw., was held yesterday in Municipal Court for grand jury action on a charge of assault with intent to kill a tenant over $108 in back rent.

The alleged victim, Joseph Manuel Sosa, 35, has been taken off the critical list at Casualty Hospital but was reported to be still in serious condition from a bullet wound in the chest.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn set bond at $5000 for McIlrath after preliminary hearing was waived. His attorney, Ben Lindas, said that the defendant will seek a reduction in bond after Sosa is out of danger. McIlrath was unable to make the high bond at the adjournment of court.

The shooting took place at the H st. address and resulted after Sosa refused to pay rent to the defendant, police said.

In the dispute, Mrs. Mary Sosa, the wounded man, and her sister, Mrs. Sarah Jane Hawkins, 29, were injured by blows on the head. The cases against McIlrath will be presented directly to the grand jury, the court was told.

Youth Shot at Him, Policeman Reports

A youth yesterday shot at—and missed—a Second Precinct scout car officer who was trying to capture him for questioning about a slashing.

Pvt. Marston Beals, 28, said he chased the youth from the 900 block of R st. nw. to the 1600 block of Covington st. nw., where he lost sight of him.

"Suddenly," Beals said, "somebody shouted: 'There he is. He's got a gun.'" Beals said he looked up, saw the fugitive aim at him with a .22 rifle, and fire.

The youth gave himself up several hours later at the Second Precinct Station.

Boy Fugitive Seized, Older One Escapes

A policeman's bullet early yesterday brought a halt to a 13-year-old fugitive from the Receiving Home, but lent speed to his 15-year-old companion, who was not captured.

They were two of five boys who escaped from the home about 9:30 p. m. Sunday, dressed only in underwear.

The shooting and arrest occurred at 4 a. m. near 1304½ N. Capitol st., where police answered a complaint by Mrs. Georgina Ciomei, who heard her home being entered.

Police took a shot at two figures fleeing from that address. The 13-year-old boy, though unhurt, gave himself up, confessed to breaking into the house and identified his companion who made good his escape. The older boy was believed to have been wounded by the shot.

A Receiving Home official said the five boys made their escape by breaking a first-floor window. Four were still free last night, police said.

Boy Flees Institution Down Rope of Sheets

Clad only in a nightgown, a 15-year-old inmate of the Industrial Home School escaped early yesterday for the fourth time in two months by sliding down a rope of sheets and blankets.

After descending from the third floor "strong room" to the second floor roof, he got to the ground via a rainpipe, an institution official said.

He was seen by a watchman, but a chase by the watchman and subsequent search by police were fruitless.

Board Meeting

CTC Session Called on Stock Sale

The Capital Transit Company's board of directors will meet on Wednesday to decide whether to hold a stockholders' meeting on sale of the company's controlling stock interest to a group of Florida investors.

President E. D. Merrill, responding to a request by C. L. McCrea for the special stockholders' meeting, said the directors will meet about 4 p. m. at the Riggs National Bank building, 1503 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

McCrea, who says he has the support of stockholders with more than 45,000 shares, asked Merrill to have the board meet. McCrea wants the board to recommend to a special stockholders' meeting that the transit line buy in the 109,458 shares the Florida group is seeking.

North American Co., a holding company which owns the big block of stock, has an agreement to sell it to the Florida group at $20 a share. The Securities and Exchange Commission now is considering an application to approve the sale without competitive bidding.

Merrill said yesterday he had heard of no action by the SEC on the application.

McCrea's latest letter to Merrill says Capital Transit could buy up the North American stock by selling some of its bonds. He also stated that by retiring the stock, about 45 per cent of the total, the present dividend rate could be doubled for the remaining stockholders, without increasing the dollars paid out.

Merrill said, however, he was not at all certain whether the directors would authorize a stockholders' meeting as McCrea suggested. At such a meeting, furthermore, North American probably could cast the deciding vote.

Forrest Warren

San Diego, Calif., July 4 (AP).—The end came peacefully today for Forrest Warren, newspaperman, who six weeks ago reported:

"I have cancer and I am going to die of it."

He died at 5 a. m. at his home. His widow, Nina, said: "He just went to sleep." He was in his seventy-second year.

He arranged for his own funeral. He told his readers in his May 17 story in the San Diego Daily Journal that the friends he wanted for pallbearers had agreed. He said he had talked with a minister about his funeral and asked him "to be brief."

"I am not afraid," he wrote.

Warren said the reason he wrote the story announcing his approaching death was to appeal for cancer fund research support.

Warren's column brought a flood of response from throughout the country, praising his attitude and cheering him on. He said:

"I face the future with faith and, in my heart, love for all."

Referring to the fact that his doctor had told him of his impending death, Warren said: "I'm glad . . . I think that all cancer sufferers should be told."

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

Last Saturday, several families along our street got together for an old-fashioned picnic. Each of us brought something for the lunch. And by sharing what little work was involved, we all had a wonderful time.

Wherever good neighbors work together, you see the same spirit that made our "block picnic" such a success. On a telephone party line, for example. The good party-line neighbor allows some time between calls so that others have a chance to use the line. He answers his own ring promptly and never interrupts when the line is in use, except to make an emergency call.

It all comes down to the simple fact that consideration for others is what makes others considerate of you. And on a party line, that means better service for everyone.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Back From Army Duty in Germany, Young Man Reflects on Many Subjects, Including Sex; Thinks Modern Girls In General Aren't Good

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young veteran and GI college student, 22, living with my family, perfectly happy, and furthermore in love with my girl Phyllis. But thoughts run through my mind on many subjects, and one of them is sex.

It seems to me that sex has permeated every aspect of life, to the detriment of the family—undermining its stability, domestic purity and wholesome social outlook. What confronted me at just 18 years of age, when I was in the Army and especially in Germany, was astounding.

I admit I plunged into that pagan immorality, but now that I am a little older and think of marriage and look at my parents, who have always been exemplary—and even, I might say, prudes—and when I look at their love and stability, I wish that sex were relegated to a definitely inferior category of experience.

Where Is Society Heading, He Asks

WHAT I CAN'T understand is why has the modern girl deteriorated so much morally? In high school I knew girls who weren't good in any sense of the word, and they had no feelings of guilt. I admit I've done wrong, but I knew what was right. In other times men probably were no better than they are today, but I believe the majority of women were different then. They weren't as immoral as they are today.

It seems that many in my generation have a nihilistic concept of life; also that generally speaking girls of today are fast, and many of them aren't good material for motherhood. I know that my own girl has been around, as the saying goes (but not to extremes); and I know that I am going to marry her because I love her.

I recognize the rational necessity of adjusting oneself to the existing mode of environment; but even so, I should like to know where we are heading, as a society. This Nation of ours is slowly being sapped of vitality and how is it going to end? Sincerely yours. G. C.

Chap Is Wrestling With Guilt Feelings

DEAR G. C.: The person who comes to full pause in a transgressor's course, who unflinchingly evaluates and profoundly repents his sins of the flesh, thereafter tends to look with compassion upon the potentials of his fellow creatures, and to experience a renewal of faith in their capacity to express great good.

In process of returning to, and consciously revitalizing the spiritual life within himself, he simultaneously recognizes the latent existence of this divine essence in all—even in those who insensibly ignore or destructively deny its existence.

It is only the person who is weighed down, subjectively, with realistic guilt-feelings that he won't responsibly face, that he refuses to consider liability for, who appraises humanity, and especially the opposite sex, with a jaundiced eye. One might call him the "nihilistic" sinner, who may not wear guilt-feelings on his face or his sleeve; but whose soul is sick with them nevertheless.

Wars Do Damage Feminine Nature

AT PRESENT, you are a disturbed member of the latter category. Actually it is your guilt-poisoned feelings about sex—instinctive inevitable after-effect of your plunge into pagan carousal—that colorate all your views of life nowadays. And consequently it seems to you that corruption is creeping wherever you look; aside, that is, from the exemplary conduct of your parents.

It may be that the modern girl, especially in war-gutted countries, is candidly more fast and loose in larger numbers, in competitive scramble for love-relatedness,—with the ratio of female to male about three to one—than could be proved of women in preceding generations.

Yet if so, ask yourself whether that desperate spectacle equates wilful "moral deterioration" on her part; or whether it represents, rather, another item in the terrible cost to humanity of gigantic repetitive man-made wars—which do incalculable violence to feminine nature. I feel that so long as men ostentatiously "rule the world," they might have the grace to refrain from casting a stone at women in prewartime and postwar sexual license. M. H.

Capital Favorite

Glamour Plus Hard Work Keeps Gladys Swarthout's Star Rising in Concert World

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

OPENING Sunday night with the National Symphony Concert was doin' what comes nat-ur-ley for Gladys Swarthout since it was her sixth annual consecutive Water Gate Concert. Miss S. is a Capital commuter, appearing here in a recital or with the orchestra at least three times yearly, and usually chalks up an extra visit to sing for some Government agency. She started 1949 right, hitting high notes at President Truman's Inaugural Dinner; a few weeks ago she performed for the Secretary of Defense; and she'll return November 28 in Constitution Hall.

Gladys is such a Washington favorite, it's interesting to note why, how. First, she possesses what's called in old-fashioned parlance, "a lovely nature." Second, she's an extremely hard worker —and she puts in as much effort singing in a town of 15,000 as she would for a concert at Carnegie Hall.

She has just returned from a coast-to-coast tour (missing the Seattle earthquake by an eyelash) during which she gave about three concerts a week. She's dated solid until mid-August when Gladys and her manager husband, Frank Chapman, will sail for Italy to see Lucy Kelston (a Brooklyn miss, now at La Scala and reputedly a second Ponselle), and several other singers on his managerial string.

MISS SWARTHOUT has sung at least 50 different opera roles, has a working repertoire of between six and seven hundred songs. This is exclusive of radio work. It's impossible to estimate how many she has sung over the air, and her radio file, by no means complete, contains over 1000 songs. Her current radio appearances will be with the U. S. Steel Corp. program and the Telephone Hour. She's starred in a number of movies, none of which she liked; and though she continues to get offers, the vehicles offered are always unsuitable. So far, Miss Swarthout has ducked television, on the theory it's not sufficiently developed.

She started to sing professionally at 13, out of sheer annoyance as a church soprano. She'd spotted the offender a year previously and hearing the chorister was fired, tucked up her hair, said she was 19 and got the job. She was a soprano then, but her mature voice is mezzo-soprano.

She was married to singer Frank Chapman 18 years ago and says about him: "He's so sweet that when I think of him I don't want to smile—I want to cry." Frank reciprocates fervidly.

They met in Florence where he was singing and Gladys visiting her vice-consul brother-in-law. Their second meeting was at her debut at the Metropolitan Opera, the third at his operatic debut.

What clinched the bargain was when they sang together a Mozart duet at Sam Pisa's musical mornings in the Plaza. They sang a duet from "Don Giovanni," and now the score, embellished with musical instruments, flowers and so on, is reproduced on her bedroom ceiling!

GLADYS owns some 50 costumes, for concert and recital, all made over a period of 12 years by Valentina, and all equipped with interchangeable accessories. In addition, she still retains her costumes from "Carmen," "Mignon" and as Julietta in the "Tales of Hoffman." In winter her summer costumes are kept in plastic containers in the attic of her country place at Redding, Conn. Come summer the woolens are parked atticward.

Unlike most stars, Gladys has no lady's maid, though she has a dresser. She packs herself, believing no one else could get the accessories right, folded so beautifully that gowns seldom need pressing—in fact, she'd never trust a Valentina model to an ordinary hotel iron. She washes and sets her own hair, too, having found this a necessity trouping small towns. The only person she takes along on trips is her accompanist —who can shift for himself and not bother her.

Her days go something like this. If she's singing at the opera that night she sleeps until 11, takes an hour walk, usually in Carl Schurz Park near their East End ave. apartment, studies the score for several hours, eats her big meal at 3:30. It seldom varies on performance days—clear soup, chops or rare steak, raw tomatoes, hot tea and half a grapefruit.

After the performance she's too emotionally exhausted to take in a party, so she's liable to eat a very light supper, with a few relaxing friends, then go home. She keeps in musical trim with an occasional lesson, while Frank, who gave up professional singing in 1942, sings with her several times a month. Gladys collects Carmeniana—anything to do with the opera "Carmen." She has some unusual old jewelry. Her latest acquisition, an anniversary present, is a huge diamond circled amythest which formerly belonged to Adelina Patti. The rare days (about two a month) when she hasn't anything to do—her greatest luxury is having a good substantial breakfast in bed (with the telephone turned off), preferably in her country house bedroom, where there's a fireplace, the canvas decorated ceiling and a lovely mixture of Venetian and French furniture.

Perhaps her most enjoyable occupation is to check her linen closet, check her own wardrobe—she's a fiend for polishing furniture, can't bear an unknown fingerprint on table or mirror.

Fur Forecast for Fall

Mink or Muskrat, You'll Pay Less for It This Year

By Peggy Preston

MISTRESS FASHION, who insists on being ahead of the season, and cares not one whit for the weather, is already preening herself for next winter.

The other day she pulled some of her new fur styles out of her closet and paraded them before the fashion press at the Statler Hotel.

Two noteworthy facts were brought to our attention. First, fur garments will cost less this year than they have in several seasons; second, lengths vary so greatly that no one needs to worry about hemlines. This year, anything goes in the matter of coat lengths.

The price range has dropped all the way along the line, but it varies according to the type of fur. There is a noticeable decrease in the cost of the precious Silverblu minks, for instance. They have come down from their mighty price pedestal and now rank alongside their more common brown haired brothers. Muskrat and other basic furs are also less expensive. In fact, the woman shopping for a fur coat this fall will have some pleasant surprises in store for her. Coats are as reasonable as manufacturers and retailers can make them.

Hemlines on fur garments appear to stop anywhere you want them to. Several full-length coats were shown in the collection of 10 at the Statler. But the majority were in the 36 and 38 inch category, at least one in the 35-inch range.

There is a preference too for small collars this year, most prominent types being the notch, Peter Pan, Johnny and rolled shawl. The Queen Anne, a high rolled collar, was shown on one of the garments. Nearly all featured a flared back and most of the sleeves were wide at the wrists, with variations of the turn-back cuffs.

Lapin, a long-time favorite with teen-agers, was shown in navy blue, the lining in a lighter shade of taffeta. Muskrat in such shades as "Golden-Glow," and "Moon-Glow" will also be attractive this season, given new interest with contrasting linings.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

SILVERBLU mink is given interesting treatment in this coat with rippling back, and wide sleeves, slit at the wrist. It was shown by H. Zirkin & Sons at the Preview of Fur Fashions for Fall, presented by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Inc., at the Statler Hotel

Philippine Ambassador Host At Independence Day Fete

WHEN THE PHILIPPINES received their independence from the United States in 1946, they forged a new link. The Fourth of July was chosen as their national holiday, and yesterday was the third "fourth" for the Philippines. The holiday was celebrated here at an embassy reception from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

The Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde, returned from his visit to Havana, Cuba, a few days ago, in time to prepare for the yearly embassy fete. He was assisted through the receiving hours by the Minister, Emilio Abello, and Mrs. Abello. Invitations were limited to 300, and in spite of the general exodus from the city, about that number came.

The United States Ambassador to the Philippines, Myron M. Cowen and Mrs. Cowen were there, said they were leaving for Manilla in two weeks. Mrs. Cowen wore a yellow print sheer and wide-brimmed white straw hat trimmed with daisies. Lady Berendsen and her husband, the New Zealand Ambassador toasted the Fourth in champagne.

Other diplomatic guests at yesterday's party were the Ambassador of Egypt, Mohamed Kamil Abdul Rahim;

How to Clean Paint Brush

Will you please tell me how to properly clean a paint brush?
C. G. K.

Brushes can be cleaned as follows: First wipe off well against side of can, then rinse in turpentine. It would be well to follow this with several rinsings in gasoline or benzine. (Be sure to do this outdoors and remember that both are extremely inflammable.) Follow by shaking out and hanging up outdoors to dry.

If paint has hardened on a brush, soak it in paint remover. There are brush cleaning compounds also which can be obtained in paint and hardware stores. A shellac brush can be cleaned either in denatured alcohol or diluted ammonia. Follow the latter with rinsing in cold water.

My 2-year-old child spilled toilet water on my maple cedar chest. I tried washing it immediately with mild suds, to no avail. There is a large unsightly white stain. Is there any possibility of removing this?
C. E. H.

Mix either powdered pumice or rotten stone (available at paint and drug stores) with linseed oil to the consistency of thick cream. With a soft cloth, rub this on the spot in the direction of the grain of the wood. Then wipe off surplus paste mixture and polish the chest in your usual manner. If this doesn't turn the trick, you may have to resort to refinishing.

In a formal wedding where the bride wears short sleeves, must gloves be worn? G. R.

Yes, if your wedding is formal and the sleeves of your bridal gown are short, you should wear gloves to match. Doeskin or French suede is generally worn with satin and heavy fabrics, and they should be 18- or 20-button length. Short kid gloves are often chosen for less formal gowns or sheer fabrics, or you may have net or lace gloves or mitts made to match your dress.

European Exiles Organized by Grew

By Christopher Phillips

Boston, July 2.—A distinguished American, former Ambassador to Japan and former Undersecretary of State, sits in retirement at his North Shore home wondering what can be done about the sad state of the world.

How to get behind the Iron Curtain? How long can the world live, cut in two? What to do when that Iron Curtain cracks, as it is bound to sometime.

Such questions former Ambassador Joseph C. Grew asks himself, and he now has one answer.

It is to organize prominent political exiles now in America who have slipped through the Iron Curtain from the six countries under Communist domination.

Jobs Are Being Found

By radio and other means these exiles are letting their friends in eastern Europe know that the outside, free world is ready to jump to their aid the minute the Iron Curtain cracks.

Jobs are being found for these exiles, jobs in spots where they do something that may be useful when the day comes for release from totalitarian control.

It is not another humanitarian undertaking; it is a shrewd political plan.

It is already under way, engineered by a group of prominent Americans.

A Bulgarian peasant leader who escaped after arrest and persecution, now is in Washington, publishing a paper for a free Bulgaria.

A member of the Hungarian Parliament who escaped from a concentration camp is heading the contact with Hungarians who would like to live in a free world. A top figure in the Benes party in Czechoslovakia who attempted to escape five times and succeeded on the sixth, is organizing for a free Czech group.

'Bound to Disintegrate'

A Yugoslav who once served as Ambassador to the United States has escaped and is turning out pamphlets that may be more effective than bullets against Russia.

Such are the people being gathered by Grew's organization for a drive against or around the Iron Curtain, ready for the day when it can no longer shut out the rest of the world.

"There are some things that governments cannot do, and this is where private citizens must step in and try to help," says Grew.

"Americans all too often have been caught unprepared, for sometimes sudden developments occur directly affecting our own national interests if not our national security and safety. Some day, sooner or later, the Iron Curtain is bound to disintegrate.

"I do not believe that a system built on the fallacious principles of communism, of terror and cruelty and denial of the human freedoms and fundamental rights can permanently exist, any more than Abraham Lincoln's United States could continue to exist half slave and half free.

"Rifts in the Curtain"

"It would be utterly impossible to predict even approximately how long and how far those countries behind the Iron Curtain will have to bear with the appalling situation in which they are placed.

"There have already been rifts in the curtain. Other rifts may well appear. When ultimately that house of cards topples, gradually or suddenly, as the case may be, we must expect possible chaos and, for the time being probably, a political vacuum.

"Let us prepare for that day in advance and see that democratic leaders are ready to return to their homelands from which so many of them are refugees, many indeed already in our country, to bring order out of chaos.

"Some of these refugees, with attributes of statesmanship and formerly persons of consequence and influence in their home countries, including writers and teachers, are on the verge of penury. The very first duty seems to be to find employment for these people in useful occupations.

"Body and soul must be kept together and vital spirit must be preserved if they are some day to fulfill the duties that may well lie ahead. This will not be charity, but help in finding suitable work. Many of these people have risked their lives and lost their homes and possessions for their faith. Can we wash our hands of them now?

Refugees to Take Trips

"Second, we want these good people thoroughly to understand our system of democracy, with all its failings, but with all its unsurpassable assets, and we want them to know our own people, their standards, their way of living, their aims and their ideals. We therefore plan to send these refugees, or as many of them as is practicable, out into our country to make contact with trade unions, farm organizations, colleges and universities, women's clubs, church groups and other civic organizations.

"We propose to put the voices of these people on the air, addressed to their own countrymen in Europe, in their own languages, in the familiar tones.

"We are not going to compete with the Voice of America. But the Voice of America, being officially sponsored and conducted, necessarily works under certain restrictions.

"It is our American habit not to leave everything to the Government. In the field of the contest of ideas there is much that private initiative can accomplish.

"We shall try when possible to bring about effective coordination of plans with groups in the United States of exiles from given countries behind the Iron Curtain . . . Similar coordination can extend to similar groups abroad.

Attack Mapped

"We have an excellent staff of high minded men and women working in the Empire State Building in New York under the direction of an old colleague of mine in the Foreign Service, Dewitt C. Poole, who combines sound judgment with the highest ideals and a vigorous determination to achieve our objectives."

There has been little fanfare to mark the arrival in America of these former leaders of eastern Europe who are being organized. Many prefer to remain anonymous to protect the lives of families who remain behind.

The small group of Americans, however, reacted to this minor immigration with characteristic American foresight. Grew met with a group of private citizens a few weeks ago to map a plan of attack on the Iron Curtain, utilizing the best talents available from this small reservoir of eastern European political exiles.

This was to be a wholly private undertaking, despite the participation of many former Government officials like Attorney General Francis Biddle, Postmaster General James A. Farley, Undersecretary of State William L. Clayton and Assistant Secretary of State Adolph A. Berle, jr. Other participants included Allen W. Dulles, Frank Altschul, Hugh A. Drum, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, Henry R. Luce, William Green, Charles P. Taft, Dewitt Wallace, Matthew Woll and Darryl Zanuck.

The broad strategy agreed on after a series of conferences was to select certain key eastern European exiles now in the United States and to assist them in the formation of national committees as symbols of democratic hope to peoples of Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia.

To this end a "National Committee for Free Europe" was incorporated under the laws of New York State on June 1 of this year. Poole, a retired foreign service officer who during World War II headed the foreign nationalities branch of OSS, became president.

Key Leaders Seen

Members are frank to state that the committee's function is not a humanitarian one. It is guided solely by hard-boiled political considerations. Who among the exiles can most effectively rally the diverse and often conflicting democratic elements within the different national groups? Which, by short wave radio or other means of communication, can best help keep alive the hope of freedom within their native lands?

In a spacious third-floor office of the Empire State Building, Poole and a small group of assistants comprising the committee's headquarters, daily interview key political and intellectual leaders from eastern Europe.

They study individual case histories as well as a variety of communications, reaching them from widely scattered sources. Gradually an intelligence file is being built up to facilitate the attack against the Iron Curtain.

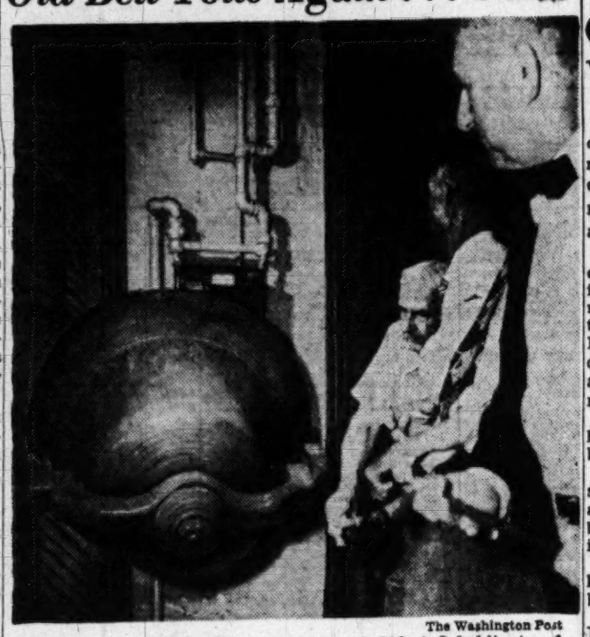
Old Bell Tolls Again . . .



The Washington Post

50 of 'Oldest' Hear Warning On Freedom

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants, gathering 50-strong yesterday to pay its annual tribute to Independence Day, was warned that present trends are "destroying the freedom of the individual for the security of all."

Representative Gerald R. Ford, jr. (R., Mich.) told the association, "I fear the original objective of the Constitution — freedom — has been overcome. I fear we are seeking to obtain another, principally security."

The Congressman suggested less "indifference by our people to their political prerogatives" and more interest in "civic enterprises, generally," such as the Red Cross and the Community Chest, as a remedy.

Fire Bell Tolls Tribute

As Representative Ford finished his address at the Old Union Engine House, 19th and H sts. nw., on the dot of 12, the old fire bell tolled its annual tribute to the Nation's birthday.

Present at yesterday's meeting was Albert Heitmuller, 1325 Gallatin st. nw., who recently celebrated his 100th birthday. Heitmuller wears the mantle of the oldest Oldest Inhabitant, all of whom must be 50 or older.

Also required for association membership is "good moral character, gentlemanly deportment and unblemished reputation," plus residence in the District for 35 years or more.

The Association indorsed Herbert Leeman, president of the Society of Natives and a member of the Ooldest Inhabitants, as a candidate for any future vacancy on the District Court or District Court of Appeals bench.

Harry W. Dowling, 3602 14th st. nw., a Central High School graduate, class of 1886, asked the association to take a stand against proposed conversion of Central High to a Negro school. A committee was appointed to investigate.

A poem by Dr. John Clagett Proctor, president of the Society, and selections by musicians from the Navy School of Music were on the program.

Israel Finds Execution Was Mistake

Tel Aviv, July 4 (NYHT).—On behalf of the Israeli army, Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion admitted today a "tragic mistake" which led to execution of a Haganah officer, convicted in Jerusalem June 30 last year of treason.

A year-long investigation, the ministry of defense disclosed, had shown that Lieut. Meir Tobiansky, of Jerusalem, was innocent of the charge of giving military information to the enemy. He was tried by a duly appointed military court martial and shot by a firing squad all in the same day.

Tobiansky, a civil engineer for the Jerusalem Electric Corp., had served with the Haganah underground for twenty-two years. Married and father of thirteen-year-old son, he was arrested on charges of providing his British superiors in the corporation with a list of Jewish users of electricity in Jerusalem. Since eletricity was rationed during the battle for Jerusalem and was supplied only to key installations such as hospitals and military bases, the court contended that Tobiansky had thus pinpointed targets for the Arab Legion artillery.

In a letter to Tobiansky's widow, who has served in the women's auxiliary of the Israeli army, Ben-Gurion said it had been ascertained that her husband had no "evil intent" although his action was a "grave mistake." Investigation disclosed, government officials said, that Tobiansky who was in his middle forties had merely fulfilled a request of the corporation management.

2 Men Found Slain; Woman Reports She Was Raped

Sonoma, Calif., July 4 (AP).—Two men were found bludgeoned to death in a mountain home north of here today after a nearly nude woman ran from the place and told a party of picnickers she had been raped.

One of the victims was identified by sheriff's officers as Peter J. Jensen, about 50, owner of the home. He was head landscape gardener of the Sonoma State Home.

The other was identified tentatively from effects in a suitcase as Peter J. Flint, 31, Richmond, Calif., only recently commissioned a deck lieutenant in the United State Maritime Service.

The nude bodies of the victims, each in a bed in separate rooms, were found after the alarm had been given by a woman they identified as Mrs. Eva Paget, 27.

Deputy Sheriff O'Brien said Mrs. Paget, mother of two children, had run out of Jensen's mountain home, clothed in only a shirt. She was bleeding on the head and screaming that she had been tied to a tree and raped. She was taken to a hopsital at Sonoma.

Jensen's cabin is six miles north of Sonoma, near the former Jack London ranch at Glen Ellen, in the Valley of the Moon.

Officers found the home heavily furnished with oriental tapestries.

Captain Fried, Famed Skipper Of Liners, Dies

Yonkers, N. Y., July 4 (AP).—Capt. George Fried, 71, who figured in many spectacular sea rescues and at one time was master of some of America's biggest liners, died today.

Among the ships he had captained were the old America, the George Washington, the Leviathan and the President Roosevelt.

A native of Worcester, Mass., he began commanding commerical vessels after 18 years in the Navy, which carried him through the First World War.

He commanded liners for 34 years.

His ships became involved in so many rescues sailors gave odds that, nine times out of ten, when a ship foundered in the Atlantic she would be in steaming distance of Captain Fried's ship.

Grasshopper Plague Blankets Vast Nevada Area, Moves On

Reno, July 4 (U.P.).—Nevada's grasshopper plague is a moving carpet that covers the ground as far as the eye can see, a visitor to the plagued area reported today.

Thomas C. Wilson said the jackrabbits, sagehens and deer "get the hell out" of the path of the swarm.

The horde ranges from about 125 miles to 200 miles north of Reno. It is making skeletons of sagebrush and stripping the range grass in the area down to the turf. The infestation covers mostly scattered cattle ranches, sage prairies, low mountains, range grasslands and barren plains where the only loss is in cattle and sheep feed.

But if the grasshoppers jump the Sierra range to the west they could strike at least part of California's lush cropland and move into Oregon.

Harry Gallaway of the Nevada Department of Agriculture said several of the forerunners of the grasshoppers crossed into Oregon last year near Denio, Oreg., a town straddling the Oregon-Nevada border, he said.

The grasshoppers, whose exact species still has not been classified, fly West against the prevailing winds—in the direction of California and Oregon.

Wilson took a jeep trip on business into the grasshopper country.

"They cover the ground like a moving carpet," he said.

"As we drove along the grasshoppers rose up like clouds. We had the windshield down and they landed in our laps like someone was tossing them in with a shovel. They got down our necks, inside our shirts, up our pants legs.

"When they are flying they sound like a million Geiger counters—click, click, click, very rapidly."

"For sheer weight of number and intensity of purpose, I believe this (plague) exceeds anything in the history of man," said W. B. Mabee, Federal entomologist at Elko, Nev. The sight of the insects was "staggering," he said.

NEA Head Urges U. S. School Aid

Boston, July 4 (AP).—The president of the National Education Association tonight called for a drive to achieve Federal aid to education, and declared: "Poor schools cost more than good schools."

President Mabel Studebaker of the Strong Vincent High School, Erie, Pa., told 5000 delegates and associates at the eighty-seventh annual convention of the teachers' group:

"It is our task to convince Congress that Federal aid for education is for the welfare of the country.

"If each person waits until it becomes a personal matter, it will be too late—too late for a generation of American children."

Miss Studebaker declared that the American ideal of a competent teacher in every classroom is at present "far removed."

Three Passersby Die In Building Collapse; 7 Hurt

Pittsburgh, July 4 (AP).—Police reported three persons were killed tonight in the collapse of a building on pittsburgh's north side. Seven were reported injured. All were passersby.

There were unconfirmed reports an explosion had preceded the collapse of the front portion of the building, described as a one-story structure.

A reporter said the building was occupied by two bars, but there was no one in them.

Hogs Roaming Country Near Wreck Scene

Oakland, Md., July 4 (AP).—Hundreds of hogs still roamed the mountainous resort countryside today, fugitives from the train wreck near here in which an engineer and fireman were killed.

The Baltimore & Ohio's fast diesel-powered Diplomat plowed into the rear of a stock train at nearby Deer Park, Md., early yesterday. Both were eastbound. The Diplomat's engine and a baggage car overturned, and five stock cars and a caboose were virtually demolished.

Dead were Engineer E. C. Fromhart and Fireman W. L. Hartman, both of Keyser, W. Va.

Most of the 500 to 1000 hogs ran squealing into the wooded hills after the stock cars were ruptured by the impact. Several that were injured were destroyed.

No official sources seemed to know just what disposition was to be made of the escaped swine.

Recluse Found Dead, Owner Of $200,000

Philadelphia, July 4 (AP).—Authorities disclosed today that a gloomy, junk-jammed row house was the home of an elderly woman recluse—with a fortune at her command—who chose to live like a pauper.

Police found the body of Mrs. Catherine S. Ritter, 79, yesterday. For nearly 30 years she had lived alone in the dark, forbidding nine-room house, subsisting on bread and milk.

Assistant Fire Marshal Joseph Heffernan and two deputy coroners said they probably were the first persons outside her family to enter the house in a half century.

Stuffed With Rubbish

The house in the once-fashionable Strawberry Mansion section was stuffed with 5-foot mounds of rubbish. In that mass of junk, police said, they expect to find a clue to the whereabouts of some $200,000 Mrs. Ritter is said to have hidden.

Authorities say they'll have to wait for court sanction before they can begin an intensified search through the junk.

Trash was level with the top of the bed in her room upstairs. She slept surrounded by old cereal boxes, a glass oil lamp, an overturned, rusty coffee pot and a frying pan which obviously hadn't been used for many years.

There was no heating system. Hinged shutters kept the entire house in complete darkness.

The history of the woman herself is cloaked in mystery.

Believes Husband Is Alive

A niece, Mrs. Lillian Kinkel, told police Mrs. Ritter was separated for many years from her husband whom the niece described as a "gentleman's tailor."

The niece said the husband settled on Mrs. Ritter at least half the 28 houses he owned about 25 years ago. Then suddenly he vanished.

Mrs. Kinkel said she believes her uncle is "still alive and may be in New Jersey somewhere."

Neighbors said they knew virtually nothing of the woman except that she used her tiny front bedroom vestibule as an "office" from which she conducted meager outside contacts.

Rents collected from houses she owned were brought to her regularly.

Elizabeth Moves Into Own House With Prince, Baby

London, July 4 (U.P.).—Prince Philip and Princess Elizabeth moved into historic Clarence House today, their first official home since they were married in November, 1947.

Elizabeth's personal flag, flying from the roof of the big, stone mansion, gave the public its first intimation that Philip, Elizabeth and infant Prince Charles had at last settled down in a home of their own.

The couple had hoped to move in during March, but extensive bomb-damage repairs and renovations delayed them.

Dr. E. B. Bryan Heads Christian Endeavor

Toronto, July 4 (AP).—Dr. Ernest B. Bryan, Washington, D. C., today was elected president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor.

He will succeed Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Philadelphia, who served as president for 24 years. Dr. Poling's retirement was announced last night.

Dr. Bryan, a visual education specialist for the United States Navy, formerly was general secretary of the society.

Poland Ready on Claims

Warsaw, Poland, July 4 (AP).—A government spokesman said today Poland was willing to act on settlement of claims arising out of nationalization of American properties here, but that the next step was up to United States representatives.

Bullet Just Stings

New Bedford, Mass. (U.P.).—Forty-eight hours after 9-year-old Richard Peckham felt a sting in his arm while walking through the woods, hospital surgeons removed a bullet from the arm. Until then, the boy hadn't realized he had been shot.

Students Take It Seriously

Tuscaloosa, Ala. (U.P.).—Student politicians at the University of Alabama take their campaigning seriously. They use every trick to get votes—from co-eds clad in swimming suits passing out literature to pamphlet-dropping from airplanes.

Man Blocks It

Move Ahead To Blast Out DP Measure

By Robert S. Allen

The stage is being quietly set to blast a bill out of the Senate Judiciary Committee to liberalize the "anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic" displaced persons law.

One Senator is blocking action on this issue.

He is Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the committee. McCarran voted for the existing law and has persistently defied President Truman and Democratic and Republican leaders of the Senate in their efforts to rewrite the law.

The House passed a new bill weeks ago. Under the measure, the number of DP entries to the United States is increased from 205,000 to 339,000 and a number of other widely-demanded liberalizations were made. McCarran has refused to hold public hearings on this bill.

Instead, he set up a subcommittee headed by himself and loaded against the measure. This subcommittee has met only once, behind locked doors. No action was taken at this meeting and since then McCarran has persisted in his one-man blockade.

So far, he has been able to get away with his obstructionism for one reason.

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) Democratic National Chairman and party patronage boss of the Senate, has been afraid to crack the whip on McCarran because of fear he may retaliate on a number of judicial appointments pending in his committee. As Judiciary Committee chairman, McCarran is in a position to stall action on these appointments.

McGrath favors liberalizing the DP law. Privately, he is making no bones of his ire at McCarran's recalcitrance. But McGrath is still hesitating about moving to forcibly take the issue out of McCarran's hanads.

As a member of the Judiciary Committee himself, McGrath is in a position to do that. He knows there is a bi-partisan majority in the committee that will support a discharge motion. That isn't the only thing McGrath knows.

He is also aware that if he doesn't act, the Republicans will.

Senators Taft (R., Ohio), Ives (R., N. Y.) and Ferguson (R., Mich.) have served notice that unless the Democrats take the leadership in prying a DP bill out of the committee, they will make the demand on the Senate floor.

Taft promised to do this in a letter to former Democratic National Chairman James Farley.

Farley is an official of an organization supporting liberalization of the DP law. He wrote Taft asking his assistance, and the Ohioan promised to act if the Senate Democratic leadership didn't.

It is this threat that is McGrant's real worry. He knows that Taft does not make idle threats and, also, that the Senate would vote to discharge the Judiciary Committee.

Barkley Unveils Bust of Biffle At Piggott, Ark.

Piggot, Ark, July 4 (AP).—Vice President Barkley today paid honor to Leslie Biffle, Secretary of the Senate.

Barkley, spoke extemporaneously to several thousand persons at a hometown celebration honoring Biffle, a longtime political and personal friend.

At its conclusion, Barkley unveiled a bronze bust of Biffle, executed by Washington sculptor Felix de Weldon on commission from the Arkansas Society of Washington. The bust will be placed in the Piggott postoffice.

Biffle was visibly moved as Barkley described him as "a man who has gone far beyond the duties of his office to help guide the course of democracy in the Nation's Capital."

Soviet Politburo May Have 2 or 3 New Members

London, July 4 (U.P.).—Experts on Russian affairs expressed belief tonight that two or three new members may have been added to the ruling political bureau of the Russian Communist Party.

The belief was purely speculative and was based on an official obituary notice of the death in Moscow of Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov.

The notice contained the names of 17 men. Twelve are the known members of the Politburo. Mingled in with them in alphabetical order were the names of five other men, an unusual procedure.

The five are P. K. Ponomarenko, member of the Communist Party secretariat; M. F. Shkiryatov, vice president of the Party Control Commission; Mikhail Suslov, propaganda secretary of the party; G. M. Popov, Moscow party secretary; and P. N. Pospelov, editor of the official Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

Normally their names have been put at the end, after those of the Politburo members.

Officer Enters Yard; Terrier Nips His Ankle

To a certain fox terrier, it makes no difference if firecrackers are illegal. He didn't like a policeman charging into his yard.

Yesterday afternoon, Police Pvt. Henry A. McElvane reported, he was patrolling in the 1700 block of 2d st. ne., when he saw "some persons" discharging firecrackers. They took off, with McElvane in pursuit, and fled into a yard.

The fox terrier intervened. He bit Pvt. McElvane in the ankle. That ended the chase. The officer went to Freedmen's Hospital for treatment, and will report today to the police and fire clinic. There was no arrest.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

DARRYL ZANUCK was in New York the other day, en route to Paris, and he read the front-page speculation about the mayoralty of New York. He was particularly intrigued by Mayor O'Dwyer's assertion that under no circumstances would he consent to be drafted . . . Zanuck told of when O'Dwyer still was district attorney of Kings County and vacationed at El Centro, Calif. He visited Zanuck's office, where he was asked about the rumors that he would be a mayoralty candidate. "Nothing to it," O'Dwyer assured them. He told them of his poor health, of the killing task at City Hall and said he never could accept the nomination, if it were offered to him . . . Two days later O'Dwyer flew back to New York and was nominated.

O'Dwyer

RICHARD FRANKENSTEEN, the former UAW official who again is campaigning for the mayoralty in Detroit, came to New York to make pictures of the East River dr., the municipal housing projects, etc., to use as campaign material. He will show them in Detroit, compare them with the meager municipal projects of the current administration . . . Democratic money raiser George Killion, head of the American-President Line, is expected to be in the Cabinet soon.

Bill Gold is on his vacation and will resume "The District Line" July 18.

GARDNER COWLES, of Look and Quick, posed this question to a group at the Stork Club, and said it was used in the oral I. Q. at the University of Minnesota. The answer, which is printed in the next paragraph of this column, must be arrived at without using pencil and paper . . . A lady who visited a zoo admired the birds and the animals, and asked the zoo keeper how many there were. The zoo keeper said he didn't know, but that he did know that at the last count there was a total of 36 heads and 100 feet among all the 2-footed birds and 4-footed animals. "So," he said, "you figure it out for yourself."

THE DUKE and Duchess of Windsor will entertain Winston Churchill in the south of France in August . . . Arthur Miller, author of "Death of a Salesman," is at work on a novel about the waterfront and the longshoremen. The playwright doesn't intend to dramatize this for Broadway, but to make a screen adaptation of the story. His plan is to film it in New York, using the cast and production and directorial staff of "Death of a Salesman" as a nucleus and develop from it a permanent independent movie organization . . . The answer to the zoo question is 22 birds and 14 animals.

NEW YORK'S leading ticket brokers met at Sardi's last week, and reaffirmed their decision to close their offices for the summer, to prove their usefulness to the theater—the proof being the expected resultant closing of four shows. They said that one musical was kept alve last week by the brokers' sale of $15,000 worth of tickets — the margin of success. . . The Ernest Hemingways have returned from Europe to their Havana home. He calls Mrs. Hemingway, who is small, pink and slightly plumpish "My pocket Rubens" . . . Adolf Berle, jr., said that if John Cashmore is the Democratic nominee, the Liberal Party would back Newbold Morris as the Fusion candidate for Mayor.

JACK HALEY, now in Chicago with "Inside USA," tells of the time Beatrice Lillie tired of a cafe engagement and suggested that the manager hire Adele Astaire to succeed her. "But what," asked the manager, "can Miss Astaire do that you can't?" Miss Lillie told him! "For one thing, she can bring her brother, Fred, along" . . . The Donaldson Awards broadcast was set for Tuesday afternoon because that was the only time Ezio Pinza felt free to sing "Some Enchanted Evening" . . . Some of the 20-ft. high statutes of "Hamlet's Ancestors," concocted by Nat Karson for the Elsinore production, will be set up in a Copenhagen Museum.

A NEW YORK actress who wanted to make some calls on the backstage phone was halted by the manager who said it could be used only for incoming calls—a rule set down by the theater owner. The lady, who is popular and needed the phone to rearrange her social schedule, enlisted the aid of her ex-husband, who is a friend of the theater owner. . . Two days later the actress asked the manager if the theater owner had eased the rule, in her behalf. "Yes," was the report. "You may use it for outgoing calls—but only to your ex-husband."

PAUL STEWART, who scored such successes in "Champion" and "The Window," just returned from Eglin Field, Fla., where he played a feature role in the movie, "12 O'clock High." He leaves for Chicago soon for location scenes in his next movie, "Postal Inspector" . . . Beth Leary will accompany the James Farleys in their three-month tour of Europe . . . The long litigation over the estate of the late songwriter, Larry Hart, at last has come to end.

BRYNIE FOY, producing "Port of New York," sent his director, Lazzlo Benedek, to New York with a camera crew to photograph some waterfront scenes. Last week Benedek took his crew to a yacht basin in this area, to take pictures of the yachts at anchor . . . The management ordered them off their premises and refused to permit them to take any pictures. The last time such consent was given, the management explained, a cameraman had photographed a noted man's yacht. The picture was published, and the man's wife successfully sued for divorce, naming as the corespondent the chorus girl aboard the yacht, whose photo clearly showed.

Junior Chamber To Be Honored By Burlington

The Junior Chamber of Commerce will be feted by the Burlington Hotel management at 7 p. m. Thursday in a testimonial dinner at the hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Given by Hudson S. Moses, owner of the hotel, the dinner is in recognition of the JCC's civic activities. A testimonial will be extended the group's immediate past administration and a welcome given to President Paul Matthews and his administration.

Barden Defends Education Stand

By Drew Pearson

The weather was hot outside, but not half as hot as the atmosphere behind the closed doors of the House Education and Labor Committee when Chairman John Lesinski of Michigan, Catholic, and Representative Graham Barden of North Carolina, Presbyterian, squared off on the issue of Federal aid to parochial schools. Both are Democrats.

Lesinski

Barden, whose aid-to-education bill has been under attack by the Catholic hierarchy, angrily assailed Lesinski for calling him a "bigot."

"I don't like this long-range sniping," asserted the North Carolinian as he sat at the committee table within 18 inches of Lesinski. "I like to look a man in the eye when I have something to say about him, rather than give out a statement to the press. You went out of your way to malign not only my integrity, but my character.

"And you did not speak the truth," Barden continued, looking at Lesinski. "I have never felt, nor have I ever said or done anything in the 15 years I have been in Congress that was discriminatory against any religion."

Lesinski replied that the press had misquoted his criticism of Barden.

"That," shot back the North Carolinian, "is a most cowardly retreat. You may try to shift the blame to the newspaper reporters, but I don't accept that explanation.

"I'm not much good in a name-calling contest," Barden continued, referring to Cardinal Spellman's blast against him. "It never accomplishes anything and I wish this one had never started. Any person should have the right in free America to conscientiously oppose something, or to be for something, without having his patriotism questioned by those who do not agree with him. God forbid that we should ever lose that right, as have the people of Czechoslovakia."

Just then the bell rang, summoning House members to the floor. With an expression of relief, Chairman Lesinski adjourned the meeting.

Gas Companies Win

The gas and oil lobby scored a great victory when millionaire Senator Bob Kerr's bill, exempting from Federal rate controls natural gas sold to pipeline companies, was approved by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in a closed-door 7-to-5 vote.

This was not done, however, before two Senators—Republican Owen Brewster of Maine and Democratic Warren Magnuson of Washington—walked out, protesting the steamroller tactics of Chairman Ed Johnson of Colorado and Ernest McFarland of Arizona, both Democrats.

Senator "Gentle" Lyndon Johnson of Texas teed off the steamroller methods. Lyndon was elected on a pledge to vote the opposite of Pappy O'Daniel, whom he replaced, but he has been slowly veering over to Pappy's point of view. At the closed-door meeting, Gentle Lyndon made a long speech on behalf of the bill, which opens the door to unlimited price boosts on natural gas retailed to consumers. Immediately thereafter Arizona's McFarland demanded that the committee vote "right now."

"This is outrageous," protested Brewster. "The bill has been revised and we haven't had time to study it."

"We've delayed long enough," persisted McFarland. "Every member has made up his mind how he will vote. Further study won't change the result. So let's get to a vote."

When Chairman Ed Johnson sided with McFarland, Brewster angrily asserted: "Then you can count me out."

"I feel the same way," said Magnuson of Washington. Both Senators picked up their papers and stalked out of the room. The surprise move left their colleagues in temporary dismay. However, Ed Johnson, fearful that the row might leak to the press, quickly took command. He decided that the two prodigals be given two more days, after which they would be "polled" and their votes added to the official roll call.

Brewster and Magnuson, therefore, eventually joined Senators Charles Tobey (R., N. H.), Francis Myers (D., Pa.) and Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) in voting "no."

The seven men who voted for the big gas companies were: Johnson (Colo.) and Johnson (Tex.), McFarland, Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), Clyde Reed (R., Kans.), Homer Capehart (R., Ind.) and John Bricker (R., Ohio).

King Farouk and Hitler

Before Adolf Hitler's $1,500,000 luxury yacht sailed for New York, where it is now on exhibition, King Farouk of Egypt came down to the Cairo waterfront for a look at it. Impressed, he sent word to the British textile king, George Arida, who now owns the vessel, to clear off all his guests, because the royal party wished to come aboard.

Arida, a British diplomat in Lebanon, gracefully complied. Once the decks were cleared, King Farouk strutted up the gangplank and, with the pomposity of Hitler himself, gave the ship the royal once-over.

The Egyptian monarch was chiefly fascinated with Hitler's binoculars. Built of lightweight metal with special eyepads, they were once used by Hitler to gaze moodily at the horizon. King Farouk adjusted them to his eyes and gave the waterfront a sweep.

"Marvelous!" he exclaimed.

Then he calmly slung them over his shoulder and continued the tour. As the royal party was about to leave, Farouk showed no inclination to give up the binoculars. As a hint, a ship's officer brought the binocular case and explained delicately that the binoculars fit inside. But the King only grunted and picked up the case.

Then, without a word, he exercised his royal prerogative and walked off with both.

Service Is Our Business ...

SAYS JACK MARKS, MANAGER OF THE HECHT CO.'S NEW YORK AVENUE SERVICE BUILDING

In 1936 the cornerstone of our New York Avenue Service Building was laid. By unanimous decision of The Hecht Co.'s management, the cornerstone was inscribed with the following words: "Dedicated To Service." This was not wishful thinking . . . nor a far-fetched hope of management . . . but a pledge to the people of Washington. Today . . . this vast structure of mortar and glass brick, stands as a symbol of a pledge fulfilled. Its half million square feet of service floor space provide our customers with an efficient delivery system and storage space for $5,000,000 worth of homewares of every type and description. Staffed with over 350 associates, the building functions as the nucleus of one of the largest homewares operations on the East Coast. Furniture, rugs, refrigerators, radios, electrical appliances, drapes, cooking utensils and toys are received, marked, inspected and stored or prepared for delivery within the six floors of the building. The receiving docks are large enough to handle many over-the-road-carriers and trailers at one time as well as a bank of railroad freight cars. (The building has its own railroad sidings). There are 34 loading platforms from which our own deliveries are made, plus space for 36 package trucks to load simultaneously. An average morning's incoming and outgoing truck traffic would give one the impression of a large truck terminal, rather than a department store service building.

In addition, the building houses our furniture finishing line where every piece of furniture is inspected and polished before delivery to our customers . . . our appliance service department where repairs are made on refrigerators, radios, television sets, washers and small electrical appliances. Our New York Avenue Service Building has its own employment office, social services, cafeteria and modern hospital room with a registered nurse in attendance. One of the first buildings of its kind in Washington . . . its unique architecture is highlighted by walls constructed almost entirely of glass brick. This not only enhances the beauty of our City, but provides light and weather insulation for the associates working within the building. Its functional efficiency stands as a monument of service . . . service to the people of Washington . . . service that makes The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop.

JACK MARKS, Manager of our New York Avenue Service Building, has been in the service end of the department store business since 1923. He was born in England and served with the RAF in World War I. He came to the United States 28 years ago and has been with The Hecht Co. for the past 15 years. Jack Marks is married . . . has one son and one daughter . . . lives in N.W. Washington and spends most of his leisure time working in his flower gardens.
